Czechs Told Religious Freedom Is Dead

End-of-Year Jam Catches President's Money Bills

Drive for Economy Heightens Worries Of Agency Heads As Deadline Nears

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

At least four and possibly seven big money bills, involving the bulk of the President's budget, will be caught high and dry by the congressional log-jam when this fiscal year ends Thursday midnight.

That means some of the largest Government agencies will be out of funds when the new fiscal year starts, but the veteran legislators say there's no real cause for alarm.

Congress has a habit of just missing money deadlines. By the time the first big Federal payroll periods roll around leaders insist most of the bills will be law. If they are not, emergency resolutions may be passed.

Cut Is Main Worry

What troubles responsible Government executives is not whether the bills will be ultimately passed but how sharply they will be cut when they are.

Even the handful of agencies for which 1950 funds have been voted aren't certain their money is laid on the line.

What adds to the uncertainty is an eleventh-hour Senate economy drive. If it succeeds, the President will be directed to make 5 to 10 per cent cuts below his budget in the final amounts voted by Congress.

Money log-jams aren't the only deadlines Congress faces as it enters a new fiscal year after six months of continuous session.

Some laws that have been basic points in the President's program, but legislators say have outlived their need, will quietly go off the books Thursday night.

Credit Controls Die

This is true of the Federal Reserve Board's anti-inflationary authority to control consumers credit and bank credit.

At least one international keystone of the Roosevelt-Truman Administration — the Reciprocal Trade Act—will lapse temporarily only to be revived again when Congress comes out of the dog days.

Leaders say the temporary lapse won't really hurt the program, since treaties already negotiated will stay on the books.

Caught behind the Taft-Hartley Act debate, and the next-in-line North Atlantic pact priority, the Senate may not get around to extending the Reciprocal Trade Act for weeks.

Some other laws expiring June 30, such as control over imports and exports of tin, supplies of which are now dwindling because of the Bolivian strike, may squeak through just before the deadline.

Skidding on Ice Blamed for N. Y. Taxi Collision

New York, June 26 (AP).—A taxicab driver was injured in a collision with another cab which skidded on ice today—the hottest day of the year in New York City.

Herman Goldberg, 51, suffered a possible fractured pelvis, police reported, when a cab driven by Arthur Irise, 31, skidded into his taxi at 53d st. and 3d ave.

"Taxicab No. 2 skidded on ice in the roadway," the police report read. It added that the ice apparently had dropped from a truck.

People in Panic

Canary Isle Hit by 'Quake And Volcano

Santa Cruze de Teneriffe, Canary Islands, June 26 (U.P.)—Earthquakes and volcanic eruptions shook the tiny island of Palma today and panicky villagers prepared to flee by sea.

Powerful explosions followed by a shower of ashes and red hot stones spewed from two small craters near the villages of Paso and Fuen Caliente and destroyed the trees but caused no other damage.

At the same time quakes split the earth into long fissures from which sulphurous fumes poured forth amid subterranean rumbling.

Red Cross ambulances and civil guard units stood by to help the frightened villagers if the lava approached their homes.

The island, most western of the Canaries, is of volcanic origin. Its last serious eruption was in 1677.

Government Eases National Rent Controls

Owners Who Increase Value of Properties Will Receive More

By The Associated Press

Four new rules easing national rent controls were disclosed yesterday. Owners putting more value into their property will be in line for more rent.

And Housing Expediter Tighe W. Woods foresaw this as a boost for business in general.

The national rent control law does not apply to the District of Columbia, which is covered by special legislation.

By encouraging owners to remodel, decorate and install new equipment, Woods predicted, the orders may provide a "significant" help to business — and perhaps help offset skidding prices and rising unemployment.

Rent ceiling increases will be granted, he said, to reimburse landlords for such outlays and for improved services to tenants. The rent hikes will reflect the rise in costs of labor and materials since 1942, when rents were frozen.

"The freeze principle of rent control is now a thing of the past," Woods told a reporter.

The actions supplement the requirement of the 1949 rent law that landlords be assured a "fair net operating income." Those who might not qualify for higher ceilings under that law may benefit from the new rules—provided tenants get "value received."

"If only $100 were spent on each of the 14 million dwellings now under ceilings, landlords would be putting $1,400,000,000 worth of new jobs and sales into the economy," Woods said.

The orders also give local rent officials much greater leeway to adjust ceilings in harmony with local real estate practices.

As one example:

If a landlord installs a refrigerator for the first time, he has until now been able to qualify for, say, a $2.50 monthly rent increase—an allowance fixed in 1942. Now, in recognition of higher prices, he might qualify for anywhere from $2.75 to $4 or more, depending on actual cost of the machine and its installation.

Tenants have a protection: The new services or improvements can be given only with their consent. But their objections, if they do protest, may be overruled in these cases:

If the increase is needed to pre-

Hoover Asks 'Porkless' School Bill

Warns of Possible Bureau Dictation In Legislation on Aid to Education

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Former President Herbert Hoover yesterday urged Congress to eliminate "pork barrel" features from aid to education and warned of possible "dictatorship" inherent in pending legislation.

As proposed now, Mr. Hoover wrote in a letter to Representative McConnell (R., Pa.), Federal aid would go to wealthy States which did not need it as well as to backward States which did. This he termed a "pork barrel appendage" whose elimination would save possibly 150 million of the estimated 300 million dollar cost of Federal aid to education.

"What we need in the national interest," he wrote, "is to bring the backward States up to the national level for educational care for children and preserve the Nation from the evils inherent in the 'grants-in-aid' system."

Mr. Hoover wrote in response to a request by McConnell for his views on a Senate bill which provides for grants to all States on a sliding scale of $5 to $29 per pupil based on economic calculations. McConnell is senior Republican member of the House Education and Labor Committee a subcommittee of which already has approved a measure similar to that passed by the Senate.

Mr. Hoover indicated a belief that only 12 States, which he did not name, actually need Federal aid to education. He pointed out that apparently 19 States were regarded as backward in the bill but said seven of those should be able to care for their children.

Tends to Spread Controls

While he conceded that the legislation carries "drastic provisions" against Federal control of local education, Mr. Hoover said it also makes demands on States which "would almost immediately bring about the beginnings" of control from Washington. And although the bill attempts to funnel the greater share of funds to States most in need, Mr. Hoover said it:

"Also has the pork barrel appendage of $5 for every child in the economically strong States as well. It thus tends to spread bureaucratic control of the school system of the whole Nation."

While he was about it, Mr. Hoover took a swing at grants-in-aid generally. He said that no matter what care was exercised, "it becomes inevitable that every such grant puts the camel's head of Federal control either under the tent of local self-government or close to it."

"With all this," he went on, "we are steadily undermining the sense of responsibility and the fundamental basis of local self-government."

He said further:

"The inevitable effects of grants-in-aid is to place a Federal bureaucracy into dictatorship over

Rep. Javits Seeks Government Aid For Theaters

Tamiment, Pa., June 26 (AP).—Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.) called on the Federal Government today to put dollars behind a move to bring theater and music to the grass roots of the Nation.

Javits said that "there are 397 cities with a population of over 25,000 in this country and 104 with a population over 100,000.

"But," he went on, "only 30 are reached by theatrical companies or first-grade musical performers."

Collected Over 40 Years

National Gallery and Library Of Congress Get Stieglitz Art

New York, June 26 (NYHT).—The collection of modern European and American paintings, sculpture and other art works assembled during nearly 40 years by the late Alfred Stieglitz will be divided among six institutions, the bulk of it going to the Metropolitan Museum of Art here, it was disclosed today by Georgia O'Keeffe, the widow of Stieglitz and executrix of his estate.

The other institutions to which the works will be given include the Art Institute of Chicago, National Gallery of Art in Washington, the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., and the Library of Congress.

A large number of prints of his own photographs will be included. The largest collection of these, including about 1500 prints, the most comprehensive set of the photographer's work, will be given to the National Gallery.

It will represent the first time photographs have been shown at the National Gallery.

Value of the entire collection, which includes about 840 items, aside from the photographs, would be difficult to estimate, but it was appraised after Stieglitz's death in 1946 at $62,000, admittedly a conservative figure.

Man Drowned

D. C. Wilts On Summer's Hottest Day

One man was drowned and another prostrated by heat yesterday as the temperature reached 96 degrees at 2:56 p. m., highest on record this year. The figure was within one degree of the all-time high mark for June 26, 97 in 1930.

The man who drowned was identified by Prince Georges County police as Beauregard Thomas, 22, 905 Boyde st., Baltimore. They said he was swimming in a quarry pit close to Blue Pond, near Beltsville, Md.

A number of rescue squads from the area were called and finally the Glen Echo squad, with a portable boat, recovered the body after two hours. It was taken to the Gasch Funeral Home, Hyattsville.

The man prostrated was John Brown, 36, 3636 Benning rd. ne. He collapsed in the 1300 block of Kenilworth ave. ne., and was taken to Casualty Hospital in fair condition.

No immediate relief is in sight. Prediction for today is "mostly sunny with high about 95." Forecasters said the heat wave may remain here for two to three days more.

The low temperature reached yesterday was 75 degrees, at 5:58

$100,000 Slot Machine Stock Causes Worry

Prince Georges Buyers Fear They May Become Only White Elephants

The $100,000 question in Prince Georges County today is what will happen to slot machines valued at that amount, bought by county men in anticipation of legal operation.

Many of the machines were purchased by gamblers hoping to transfer their activities to the supposedly legitimate business of placing slot machines in taverns and stores.

Also included in the worried group are legitimate merchants and tavern operators who had invested fair-sized sums, in some cases for machines to be used in their own locations. Who bought how many machines could not be learned but an authoritive source provided information on the total amount invested.

All expected the legalization of payoffs on the machines as approved in a county referendum, until Judge Charles C. Marbury last Thursday tossed in a bombshell by ruling the law authorizing the referendum illegal.

The new machines, it was pointed out, will be worth little if laws authorizing the machines elsewhere are also ruled void. Some experts suggested other slot machine laws in southern Maryland counties may have the same legal fallacies as that of Prince Georges County.

In addition, Prince Georges County Commissioners are considering ordering a halt to use of slot machines whether they pay off or not, or, at least, a real drive against payoffs under the counter, with smashing of the machines where violations are found.

County Police Chief Ralph W. Brown has already ordered a drive against the undercounter payoffs.

Democrats Hit McMillan On 'Red' Tag

Leaders Remind Home Rule Enemy That It's Pledged In the Platform

If Representative McMillan (D., S. C.) is correct in his stand on the drive for home rule in the District, then he places a "Communist" tag on the entire Democratic Party, Democratic leaders said here yesterday.

They replied in a statement to Representative McMillan's letter in which the chairman of the House District Committee underscored his opposition to home rule in Washington and put the "Red" label on some of those who support it.

Representative Auchincloss (R., N. J.), author of a home rule bill, also criticized Representative McMillan.

"I am afraid," he said, "that Mr. McMillan knows so little about home rule that he doesn't understand its implications. He did not attend any meeting of a subcommittee on home rule of which he was a member during the Eightieth Congress."

Gerhard P. Van Arkle, secretary of the Democratic Central Committee for the District, issued the statement after consultation with Melvin D. Hildreth, Democratic National Committeeman for Washington, and James W. Bryan, publicity director for the central committee.

"Representative McMillan's statement is an amazingly inaccurate one, coming from a person in his position," Van Arkle said. "He must know, or he could know if he bothered to look it up, that home rule for the District has been in every national platform of the Democratic Party since 1892. That, incidentally, was before any Communist Party existed.

"And in his position, Representative McMillan should know, whether he actually does or not, that District suffrage has been called for in the last three Democratic platforms, including the one adopted in 1948.

"The only question is whether all Democrats, or those who presume to call themselves Democrats, shall cooperate and unite to carry out the pledges in the platform.

"To deny the franchise here is very reminiscent of conditions in Communist-dominated countries."

Representative McMillan's letter to an unidentified correspondent in South Carolina was made public here Saturday.

"I do not know who your friends are in Washington who desire home rule," he wrote, "as I have not had 12 letters from people in Washington in favor of home rule; and these, with the exception of two or three, were all people who had communistic tendencies and were interested in securing control of the Federal government."

Culver B. Chamberlain, president of the Central Suffrage Conference, wrote Representative McMillan a letter asserting that the "Communist tendency" charges are unfounded and that it is "now incumbent" upon the District Committee to hold hearings on home rule legislation immediately.

Chamberlain wrote that Communists could have "no more effective argument" than the McMillan letter "against efforts of the United States to promote democracy in other parts of the world." He "respectfully suggested" that McMillan "withdraw such unfound charges and clear the record by calling for public hearings immediately."

Year's Courtship Bodes Best For Marriage, Adventists Told

Hurried courtships, finances and lack of plans together for equitable economic running of the home cause modern marriages to go on the rocks, Elder George E. Vandeman told the Seventh-day Adventist young people yesterday.

Elder Vandeman

Speaking to 1500 youths at the annual 10-day camp meeting of the Potomac Conference of Seventh-day Adventists in Sligo Church, Takoma Park, Md., the churchman advocated a year's courtship for all persons before marriage.

"It has been proved that marriages that have sustained the test of a year's courtship are more usually permanent," he said. But, he added, most of the time the courtship is "too hurried."

"Chance acquaintances," he declared, "too frequently result in marriage without any consideration of the sacred responsibilities involved."

The elder is associate secretary of the Ministerial Association of the denomination's general conference, the world headquarters of which are in Takoma Park. He is married and is the father of two children.

Six ways to make for a lasting marriage, he said, are: "Expect your love to grow; express your gratitude often, continue courting; balance your lives with humor; master money, and sanctify sex."

He also urged married couples to "play together, respect privacy, seek God together, make home a heaven, and grow old gracefully."

"Faults may appear which were once hidden in a golden mist; excellencies may seem to fade in the glare of the noonday sun," he said. "Still," he urged, "remain confident and hopeful, and amid the reality of present imperfection, believe in the ideal because you saw it once and it still exists."

He recommended 23 as the "ideal age" for marriage for a man and 21 for a woman.

He listed as one of the prime reasons for the break-up of homes today, the fact that couples today leave God out of their plans.

He condemned dancing and the "popular trend" in motion pictures, telling the young people only 5 per cent of today's movies appeal to church-going people.

Denounces Communist Tactics

Catholics' Hour of Trial Near, Says Archbishop

Police in Control Of Beran's Palace; Priests Assigned Role in Struggle

ARCHBISHOP JOSEF BERAN

Prague, June 26 (U.P.)—Archbishop Josef Beran charged today that nuns and priests were being forcibly removed from Czech convents and monasteries and are being shipped to other church properties in freight cars.

In the second pastoral letter smuggled past the tight police guard on his palace and read in some churches today, the archbishop declared that religious freedom in Czechoslovakia is dead and warned the nation's nine million Catholics that their "hour of trial" is near.

The letter said secret police are in control of the archbishop's palace.

When the letter was read in the ancient Church of the Crusaders in Prague an apparently organized leftist clique broke up the service, shouting demands that the prelate be hanged.

Message Instructs Priests

Along with the letter was a message instructing priests on their part in the church-state struggle. It told them to get and disseminate news from the Vatican City radio, and advised them not to try to contact Archbishop Beran or the palace.

The archbishop himself did not appear in any of Prague's Catholic churches today. But the pastoral letter, 4000 words long, was the second secretly delivered to priests since police occupied his palace June 15.

It was the most bitter denunciation of Communist tactics since the Roman Catholic Church began its struggle for survival with the state 16 months ago.

'Completely Curtailed'

Beginning with the hope "This letter will reach you with the help of God," the archbishop said:

1. His own freedom is "completely curtailed"; secret police are in control of the archbishop's palace and even his seal; all communications coming from the palace are to be ignored.

2. The state has deprived the church of most its rights in a "well-planned and carefully carried out persecution." This persecution is both "public and secret."

3. The state is in the process of stripping from the church its property; in Slovakia nuns and priests have been forcibly removed from convents, monasteries and schools and shipped to other points in freight cars.

4. Freedom of assembly for Catholics loyal to Pope Pius XII has ceased to exist except in churches; all church publications have been suppressed and government publications substituted for them.

Pravda Jeers President on Paris Parley

'Vindication of U. S. Policy' Only 'Funny,' Scoffs Reds' Organ

Moscow, June 26 (AP).—Pravda said today President Truman's recent statement on the work of the Big Four foreign ministers in Paris was laughable.

Referring to a comment by the President that the agreements reached at Paris last Monday represented vindication of a United States "policy of firmness," Pravda, the Communist Party organ, declared:

"Such claims are capable only of arousing laughter, they are so funny."

President Truman's statement (made on Secretary of State Dean Acheson's return to Washington from Paris) was intended only to "mask the failure of American foreign policy," Pravda said. It added that the agreements reached at Paris represented a victory for Soviet policy.

Evidence of this, the paper con-

West Berlin Railroad Men To End Strike

Paralyzed Service To Western Zones Expected to Resume

It was hoped full railroad service between Berlin and the Western occupation zones, paralyzed as the result of the strike, would be resumed within a few days.

Anticipating the end of the strike, Western Allied authorities invited the Russians to meet them Tuesday and start negotiations on the agreement reached at the Paris Foreign Ministers Conference for a live-and-let-live arrangement between the Western and Eastern sectors of Berlin.

Assassin Murders Kim Koo; 'Tiger' Korean Republic's Foe

Seoul, Korea, June 26 (NYHT).—Kim Koo, provisional president of the Korean government-in-exile through its many years in China, and recently a major opponent of President Synghman Rhee in the new South Korean Republic, was assassinated today at his home here.

The 73-year-old political leader was shot to death by Ahn Do Hi, a second lieutenant of artillery in the South Korean army, police said.

Lieutenant Ahn walked unchallenged past three metropolitan policemen guarding the house and was permitted to go to the second-floor bedroom where Kim Koo was resting alone.

After five minutes of conversation there were six shots from Lieut. Ahn's .45 caliber automatic. Four bullets entered Kim Koo's body and he died almost instantly.

The assassin was captured by the police guard.

Kim Koo, nicknamed "the Tiger," was himself a terrorist and generally suspected of complicity in the assassination of one of his political enemies, Chang Duk Soo, here in 1947.

He took a leading part in the fight to prevent the trusteeship which had been agreed upon by Russia and the United States.

London 'Saved' In Mock British Air Engagements

London, June 26 (AP).—London was "saved," but several Midland and coastal cities "suffered extensive damage" as British, American and Dutch war planes engaged today in mock battles over Britain.

It was the second day of Operation Foil, most elaborate air defense exercise since the war. It will last another week.

Referees withheld comment, but the British defensive forces were jubilant. Fliers of a group of jet Vampires were up at fighting altitudes around noon in time to head off bombers approaching London from the west.

Coventry, Birmingham, Peterborough, Yarmouth, Leicester and many other communities which figured in the grim news in the days of the Battle of Britain were assailed by the mock attackers. Some of them, theoretically, were not as fortunate as London.

Some U. S. Superfortresses, on the "enemy" side, managed to get through the Midlands before there was effective interception.

China Reds Admit Revolts in North

But He'll Fight

Taft Expects China Reds' Recognition

By the United Press

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) predicted yesterday the Administration will exert "a lot of pressure" for full diplomatic recognition of the impending Communist regime in China.

He made his statement as he and other Senators urging more United States aid for the beleaguered Chinese Nationalists awaited the State Department's decision on whether the United States will observe the Nationalist blockade of Communist-held ports.

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) told the United Press that if the State Department, in collaboration with the British, chooses to ignore the blockade, 'it would mean American policy has undergone a complete shift; that the United States is now backing the Communist government."

The State Department is discussing its future course in China with other nations affected by the passing of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist regime in North China. It has not hinted whether the Communists will be recognized but some time soon, perhaps this week, it may issue a white paper on the entire Chinese situation.

The document reportedly will charge that corruption within the Chiang government led to the Nationalist downfall in North China and the withholding of further American aid to the Nationalists.

President Truman could recognize the Red government without asking congressional approval. But if he wanted to implement that program with funds and a United States Ambassador, he would have to ask Congress for approval of both.

Taft, Knowland and a bipartisan group of 19 other Senators appealed to the President Friday to withhold recognition of the Communists and, instead, bolster the faltering Nationalists with more "assistance and friendship."

"There will be a lot of pressure to recognize the Communist government," Taft said. "I think it should be discouraged in every way possible."

He added that Mr. Truman's nomination of W. Walton Butterworth as Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs provides Congress with "the best possible opportunity" for a full-scale review of China policy.

While Butterworth's confirmation by the required two-thirds vote appears probable, several Senators are indicating they will insist on full debate on China before the nomination comes to a vote.

Shanghai, June 26 (U.P.).—The official Communist news agency reported today that anti-Communist revolts had flared at several points in Red China, and warned loyal Communists to beware of "imperialists" and the government's "special service bandits."

An editorial carried by the New China Agency revealed for the first time that uprisings had occurred in the north Chinese provinces of Honan, Anhwei and Hupeh, and at several points south of the Yangtze River.

The agency blamed "foreign imperialists" and Chinese government "reactionaries" for the revolts, and mentioned the alleged spy activities of the U. S. Consulate at Mukden, Manchuria, and other activities of foreign and native "sabotage elements" as signs of an extensive underground campaign against the Communists.

A New China dispatch claimed that "Western Pacific Task Force Commander Binford" recently met Chinese Admiral Kwei Yung-ching in the south Chinese port of Amoy, and it also charged that government representative Kan Chieh-hou had presented 'a secret plan for the last struggle in west China" to President Truman.

Canada Votes Today on Its Own New Deal

Toronto, June 26 (AP).—Canada's ruling "New Deal," the Liberal Party headed by Louis St. Laurent, puts its fate to the voters Monday in a national election.

The Liberals came to power in 1935, two years after Franklin D. Roosevelt became President in the United States, and pushed through several measures on the social security level similar to U. S. laws. As the party in power, riding on a credit of at least semi-prosperity, it has another advantage: it was able to set the time of election.

The Liberals could have stayed on without an election until August, 1950, but decided last April to make the bid this year.

The main opposition seeking to replace the Liberals is the Progressive Conservative Party headed by George Drew, former Premier of Ontario. This party is Canada's nearest equivalent to the Republicans of the United States. It charges the Liberals with taking over too much power for the federal government.

Canada has an election system based more upon the British style than the United States way. It does not elect the prime minister as such; it will elect 262 members of a new House of Commons. These members of parliament, in turn, will select the prime minister—with the party that is able to control the most seats naming the national leader.

Pro-Leopold Votes Lead in Belgian Poll

Brussels, Belgium, (Monday) June 27 (AP).—Supporters of exiled King Leopold III took an early lead in yesterday's parliamentary elections, but a spokesman conceded they would not win the clear majority they had sought.

R. Faux, secretary to former Premier Paul van Zeeland and a spokesman for the Social Christian Party, made his prediction early today on the basis of 521,455 tabulated votes, about 10 per cent of approximately 5,500,000 ballots.

That count gave the Social Christians 45.6 per cent of the votes.

A later tabulation of 1,181,132 votes gave them 48.5 per cent. These figures were:

Social Christians, 573,210, or 48.5 per cent; Socialists, 334,335, or 28.3 per cent; Liberals, 148,599, or 12.6 per cent; Communists, 89,171, or 7.6 per cent, and minor parties, 35,871, or 3 per cent.

The Social Christians' lead began to drop after midnight as votes began coming in from Socialist-voting industrial and mining areas.

The Social Christians' failure to win a majority would blast their hope for an immediate referendum on Leopold's return from his five-year exile. It was the only party supporting the referendum. Apparently Belgian women—voting for the first time—were not giving their full support to King Leopold as some had believed would be the case.

Soviet Renews 'Prior Claim' To Antarctic

London, June 26 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow today restated Russia's "prior claim" to the discovery of Antarctica, and attacked the claims of "certain bourgeois states" to sections of the South Polar continent.

A broadcast quoting a lecture by a Soviet scientist discounted American claims to have discovered the icebound southern territory in November, 1820.

"Even if it were confirmed that (American explorers) indeed discovered the coast of the Antarctic continent, this by no means alters the true case, as the Russian expedition discovered this continent earlier—in January, 1820—almost a year before,

"Britain and her dominions, and also Chile, Argentina and France are claiming parts of the Antarctic," the broadcaster added. "Norway has declared Peter I Island to be her possession, which gave rise to a note of protest from the Soviet Union January 27.

"The Soviet government notified Norway of the illegality of her actions."

Airlift Total: 2 Million Tons In One Year

Frankfurt, Germany, June 26 (U.P.).—The Allied Airlift, greatest airborne supply operation of all time, brought everything including the kitchen sink into Berlin during the first year of its existence.

The sink was brought in by an airlift crew last week, just in time for today's celebration of the airlift's first birthday.

"We flew in everything else, so we thought it was time we brought the kitchen sink," the pilot said.

So far Allied planes have flown the equivalent of 215 roundtrips from earth to moon—an estimated total of 95 million miles. Almost two million tons of supplies have been airferried into the city the Russians thought they could starve out.

Today the man who runs the airlift, Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner, said that, like the horseless carriage, it was here to stay.

Yugoslav Press Jeers at Tale Of Virgin's Image on Windows

Belgrade, June 26 (AP).—Yugoslavia's official press pooh-poohed today claims by many Yugoslavs that they have seen images of the Virgin Mary with a babe in her arms on rain-drenched shop windows.

The papers called the claims "nonsense" and said they were sponsored by reactionaries attempting to prove to the country's youth and Communists that God exists. The newspaper Politika said it was all an effort of Yugoslavia's foes to employ superstition for their "dirty aims."

One technical explanation, given by the trade union publication Rad, said the sun's rays on wet glass sometimes produce colored images, but it added tersely: "The images are born in the peoples' imagination."

The same claims were voiced in Romania only three weeks ago and the official press of that Communist country also had to take official cognizance of them for denial purposes. Newspapers there also used the sunlight-on-wet-windows explanation.

Beran Directive To Czech Clergy

Prague, June 26 (U.P.).—Text of Archbishop Josef Beran's directive to the clergy, distributed today along with copies of a pastoral letter:

THIS pastoral letter is to be read in the course of worship in all Catholic Churches.

Do not allow yourselves to be freightened by threats. In these difficult times all are "conscience-bound" to inform the faithful of the true state of affairs. Whoever consciously and voluntarily does not carry out this serious obligation can be punished by the appropriate penalties. (Signed by the Archbishop's ordinariate in Prague.)

1. Do not write to the consistory, nor to His Excellency.

2. The exact text of the decree from the Holy office condemning the schismatic Catholic action:

"The Holy office fulfilling its task of protecting undisturbed faith and morals in the name of the Holy Father repudiates and condemns Catholic Action as a schismatic apostate and declares that all individuals, priests or laymen who with full consciousness and voluntarily supported or now support it are punished with excommunication. If they should deliberately continue in their error they can be punished with other church penalities. Dated June 20, 1949, from the Palace of the Holy Office in Rome."

3. Consistenly return the Gazette of the Catholic Clergy and the Catholic News, even if they should have perhaps the imprimatur of the ordinariate.

4. Listen regularly to the Czecholsovak news from the Vatican Radio and equip your instrument with an outside aerial for better reception. (Followed by a list of time schedules and wave-lengths.)

Archbishop Warns 9 Million Czechs of an Hour of Trial

letter was a message to the Catholic clergy telling them what to do in "these difficult times." This message, which was not read aloud, told all priests:

1. They were "conscience-bound" to tell the truth about the church's battle with the Communist government under threat of punishment.

2. They must not try to contact Archbiship Beran or write to the palace.

3. Return unopened the Gazette of the Catholic Clergy and the Catholic News, published now by the government.

4. To listen regularly for Czechoslovak news from the Vatican City radio and to equip their radios with outside aerials for better reception. The message contained the Vatican's broadcast schedules and the wavelengths for tuning in.

Excommunication Ignored

The message also included the exact text of the Holy Office's excommunication of all Catholics who support the government founded Catholic Action. This had been ignored by the state-controlled Czechoslovak press.

The pastoral letter was signed by Archbishop Beran, Archbishop Josef Matocha, whose palace at Olomouc also is said to have been occupied by police, and by the country's eight bishops.

"Since we have no other means we are accordingly issuing this pastoral letter, hoping that with the help of God it will reach you," the letter said.

There was no way of knowing how many copies successfully reached their destinations, but it was read in five Catholic churches in Prague, including Great St. Vitus Cathedral and, church sources said, from "many" other pulpits.

At the small, ancient Church of the Crusaders the reading of the letter touched off a brief but noisy demonstration which broke up the sermon.

Small groups of men, apparently organized, dispersed through the crowd of 400 at the 10 a. m. mass, shouting "Hang them (the board of bishops) and their chief."

Women wept and men in the congregation shouted back at the hecklers. Then the people began to sing hymns and, as the hecklers left, followed them out, still singing.

At St. Vitus Cathedral, where a similar demonstration last Sunday forced Archbishop Beran from the pulpit, the letter was read to 1000 worshipers at the 9 a. m. mass in awesome silence, broken only by muffled sobs and whispers.

At the end of the afternoon service at St. Vitus, some 300 Catholics stood outside the archbishop's gray, baroque palace and sang the Hymn of St. Wenceslaus and the national anthem. They left finally when the archbishop did not appear.

Eight days ago the 60-year-old prelate warned Catholics he may soon be silenced and to beware of any confession or church-state agreement attributed to him.

Today in the letter which reportedly was slipped through the tight police guard on the brick building, the archbishop said the church wanted a "sincere, fair and true" agreement with the state, "not dictation."

The Roman Catholic Church did not want to become "the herald of a new world (Communist) philosophy under the guise of Christian religion," the archbishop said.

Hour of Trial Will Begin

"We do not want the church to become a mere servant of the state.

"If such an agreement can no longer be reached because it has been decided (by the state) to use all means to fight against the Church of Christ, then the hour of trial for Catholics in Czechoslovakia will begin," the letter said.

Replying to accusations of "sabotage" and "collaboration with enemies" flung at church leaders by Premier Antonin Zapotocky and Minister of Justice Alexei Cepicka, the letter said:

The church has always been loyal to the republic and the clergy had always been instructed by their bishops to refrain from political action, "especially of an antistate character."

The letter sternly forbade formation of further branches of Catholic Action and reiterated the church's charge that the government had forced priests to support it through "pressure and subterfuge."

(The Roman Catholic Church has an organization called Catholic Action. The Czech government set up a rival association and appropriated the name "Catholic Action." This resulted in the Vatican's excommunication of all voluntary members of the group.)

Dwelling on the muzzling of the Catholic press, the letter said the government now is censoring prayer books. It reiterated warnings that the Catholic News and the Gazette are no longer church publications, but were put out by "non-Catholics in an antichurch spirit."

"The church has been deprived of the majority of its free rights and is publicly and secretly persecuted—on the radio and in public speeches," the letter said.

"Agents of the State are being placed in Catholic publishing houses. Any kind af assembly or teaching Catholicism outside the church has been forbidden under the threat of punishment.

"The church is losing the remnants of its possessions and not even the legally fixed minimums are maintained. In many cases pay to the clergy has been stopped.

"Church schools have almost ceased to exist and the fate of those few remaining is in terrible uncertainty and the pupils and their families suffered most for this," the letter said.

It said religious teachers in Catholic seminaries are being forced to teach Marxism and "it is impossible to give an education in the Christian spirit, in fact it is regarded as almost illegal."

Church Clash Chronology

By The Associated Press

The conflict between the Communist-controlled Czechoslovak government and the Catholic Church began as soon as the Reds seized control of the country in the February, 1948, coup.

The controversy, centering on the person of the Czech primate, Archbishop Josef Beran, has increased steadily in tempo and appears to be reaching its climax. The archbishop, now isolated in his palace and surrounded by state police, has been able to communicate formally with his followers only through pastoral letters.

The basic issue is the same it has been in every country where dominant Marxism confronts earnest churchmen of whatever creed: freedom of religion versus the authoritarian state. Organized religion has frequently offered a rallying point to opponents of a totalitarian regime.

Specifically, the Czech government insists on the control of all education and says all teaching must be along Marxist-Leninist lines. The Catholic Church, basically opposed to communism, has conducted church schools in modern Czechoslovakia—and old Bohemia—for centuries.

Accused of Spying

The government has accused priests of serving as spies for "Western imperialists."

Finally, on June 1, the government, after lengthy and fruitless church-state negotiations had broken off, announced it would control the appointment of new priests and Catholic personnel.

Here are dates of outstanding developments during the conflict:

February 23, 1948—Archbishop Beran is refused permission to pray on radio for peace during Communist coup.

May 25—The archbishop orders the Rev. Joseph Plojhar, a priest holding the post of health minister, to choose between the government and the Catholic Church. Plojhar chose the government and was stripped of his priestly privileges June 19, 1948.

August 30—Catholic Church appeals to government for promise of freedom of religious activity.

September 12—Interior Minister Vaclav Nosek charges Catholic Churches misused for propaganda and political excitement.

Expelled From Union

September 22—Archbishop Beran, who was imprisoned at Dachau during the war, is expelled from the Union of Resistance Fighters because of his attacks on Plojhar.

December 2—Czech press and radio attacks Catholic Church because of pastoral letter telling church members to be prepared for a "new heroic test of their faith in the church."

April 25—Archbishop predicts government will accuse him of being an enemy of the working class.

May 21—Archbishop announces church-state political negotiations were broken off March 23 because recording devices had been placed in the conference room.

May 24—Archbishop threatens to excommunicate Catholics backing the government against the church.

May 26—Archbishop writes a letter to President Gottwald protesting restrictions on religion.

May 30—Government announces plan to control all education.

June 1—Archbishop ends all negotiations between church and state. Government announces plan to control appointment of priests.

Issues Defiant Letter

June 11—Archbishop issues defiant letter after arrest of secular priest. "More than 100" other priests reported in prison. Government-approved "anti-capitalist" Catholic group set up.

June 13—Government heads say peace between state and church "up to the church" and promise concessions "for justified demands."

June 17—Archbishop Beran is a virtual prisoner in his own palace. Three Prague priests arrested and church records seized.

June 18—Archbishop emerges from semicaptivity and issues defiant statement against the Communist government.

June 19 — Communist demonstrators drive archbishop from throne in midst of sermon at St. Vitus Cathedral.

Compromise Ruled Out

June 20—Pastoral letter asserts controversy. Rumor at Vatican says archbishop will be made a cardinal. Wave of arrests of priests reported in Moravia. The Vatican excommunicates Czech Catholics joining Communist groups.

June 21—Premier Antonin Zapotocky accuses archbishop of ordering priests to spread a "concoction of untruthful lies" against the government and threatens legal action.

June 22—Catholic employes in government offices ordered to sign statement they do not support archbishop.

June 23 — Archbishop Beran completely isolated from clergy and flock. Archbishop Josef Matocha of Olomouc also reported arrested.

June 24—Government announces strong police campaign under way against Catholic bishops and priests in Slovakia. Church and diplomatic quarters report the closing of monasteries and the arrests of priests in Catholic stronghold.

June 25 — Justice Minister Alexei Cepicka charges archbishop with "spreading lying reports" about government.

Union Threatens Force In Jap Rail Reduction

Tokyo, June 26 (AP).—The Leftist-led National Railway Workers Union voted at its national convention today to "resort to force if necessary" to prevent reduction in railway personnel.

Most Japanese railways are owned by the government, which is planning a general retrenchment program on orders of occupation authorities to reduce government overhead.

finally that the workers were making excessive demands.

They announced that unless the strikers went back to their jobs Tuesday they would be cut off the unemployment relief benefits which have been paid by the city government of the Western sectors of Berlin.

Strike leaders met for four hours at headquarters of the UGO union, then announced the men would go back to work.

Under a final offer made then, the railroad men will get all their wages in Western-issued German marks, as they originally demanded. But they will go back without getting the iron-bound guarantees they had demanded against reprisals by the Russians.

"This fact proves the in consistency of the policy of boycotting the Council of Foreign Ministers" which the Western Powers pursued for two years "on the basis of their anti-Potsdam policy," Pravda declared.

In connection with agreements on an Austrian treaty, Pravda said they were due solely to a change in the position of the Western Powers.

"Contrary to the statement of Truman," the paper stated said, "This became possible exclusively because proposals of the Soviet government were accepted and the United States, England and France renounced their policy of sabotage of the lawful demands of the Soviet Union.

Pressure Rising

Britain Fears Major Crisis In 2 Weeks

By Ned Russell

London, June 26 (NYHT).—Britain is under pressure on five economic fronts which are likely to produce a major crisis within the next two weeks, it was learned tonight.

All five fronts relate directly to the United States and they are expected to produce an acute problem in Anglo-American relations.

The five problems, whose importance to this country increases almost daily, are:

1. The diminishing state of Britain's gold and dollar reserves. At the beginning of the European Recovery Program, these reserves amounted to $2,208,000,000 and the government said it was not safe to go below that figure. At the end of last March, they were down to $1,884,000,000. That figure was not considered too alarming, but there are persistent reports that the next figure to be announced early in July, will show a dangerous decline.

Value of Exports Declining

2. The rapidly declining value of Britain's exports to the United States. This is attributed partly to the American recession, to the high prices of British goods, to high American tariffs in some instances, and to poor British salesmanship.

3. Speculation about devaluation of the pound, which seems to be centered mainly in Washington and New York but now is appearing in Brussels and Paris. Many American buyers are postponing orders or delaying payments in the belief their costs will come down if and when the pound is devalued. (It is believed Sir Stafford Cripps would resign as Chancellor of the Exchequer rather than devalue the pound.)

4. The row between Britain, on the one hand, and Belgium and the United States over the proposed scheme for intra-European payments in the Enropean Recovery Program during the year beginning July 1. The proposal, which involves increased transferability of European currencies into dollars, is adamantly opposed by Sir Stafford.

Drop in United States Buying

5. The sharp falling-off of American purchases of British colonial rubber, cocoa, tin and wool. American purchases of these commodities form one of the most important dollar-earning sources for Britain. They have fallen off in the past two months to a degree that has stirred both alarm and anger among many high British officials.

The first official hint of the crisis may come Wednesday at Paris when the controversial intra-European payments scheme is discussed by the Organization for European Economic Cooperation.

The problem was discussed by representatives of Britain, the United States, Belgium and France at Brussels Thursday but there was no break in the deadlock.

The British Chancellor appears to be fighting a lone struggle against Belgian-American-French pressure. There were widespread reports today that Sir Stafford would seek to jolt the OEEC into acknowledgement of his position by the statement he will make Wednesday.

By The Associated Press

Capitol Hill expects a White House decision today on the ticklish question of European arms program strategy.

The problem is to get legislation through Congress at this session without hurting the chances of the North Atlantic Security Pact.

And apparently the decision on just when the arms program will be submitted formally to Congress with a request for action is of such importance that it will have to come from President Truman himself.

Cue From Conference

Acting Chairman Richards (D., S. C.), told a reporter the House Foreign Affairs Committee expects to get its cue out of the customary Monday morning conference between Mr. Truman and his congressional lieutenants.

This meeting takes to the White House Speaker Rayburn, House Democratic Leader McCormack (Mass.), Vice President Barkley, and Senate Democratic Leader Lucas (Ill.).

"I expect this meeting to give us the signal," Richards said.

Secretary of State Acheson told both Senate and House Foreign Affairs Committees last week that in order to back up a "firm policy" toward Russia it is of "utmost importance" that Congress at this session ratify the treaty and authorize the arming of America's European allies.

Question of Timing

Acheson has been talking with supporters of Administration foreign policy in Congress on whether the arms program should be submitted without waiting for the pact to clear the Senate.

Ratification of the treaty is up to the Senate alone, and it already has been submitted for approval.

Both Senate and House must pass the arms program, which totals $1,130,000,000 for the western countries, and 320 million dollars for continued aid to Greece and Turkey. This program has not reached Congress.

Linda Darnell's Sister Injured in Rodeo Act

Sonoma, Calif., June 26 (AP).—Movie Star Linda Darnell's sister was burned, cut, knocked unconscious and dragged 200 feet by her stunt horses at today's Sonoma County rodeo.

Monte Malaya Darnell, 20, was trying her flaming hoop act. That is a ride with one foot on each of two horses through a giant hoop of fire. The horses shied and ran outside the hoop, spreadeagling the girl.

The flaming hoop fell on her and she was dragged by the horses.

The extent of her injuries had not been determined.

GOP Strategy Group to Get Scott Report

By the United Press

The new Republican strategy committee will hold its second meeting here Tuesday, to hear a "progress" report from GOP National Chairman Hugh Scott, jr., it was announced yesterday.

The committee includes Republican members of Congress and national committeemen who are planning a Republican comeback in next year's congressional elections. The first meeting was held here in April.

Scott said he would report to the committee on rapidly-developing plans for three regional conferences. These include a farm conference in the Midwest, and an industrial conference in New England, tentatively scheduled for early fall, and a western States conference on conservation, tentatively scheduled for Colorado Springs next spring.

Scott also plans to report on "increasingly effective cooperation" between the national committee and GOP members of the House and Senate in carrying the Republican message to the voters.

He said this cooperation has been "particularly impressive" in the fields of radio and newspaper publicity.

IT ISN'T THE HUMIDITY—Smoke billows from the burning skeletons of open-type buildings on the Baltimore & Ohio coal dock on Staten Island. The fire gave an unofficial boost to the New York heat wave, which already was near a record yesterday

New York Fire Blankets Area In Smoke Pall

New York, June 26 (AP). — The Baltimore & Ohio Railroads' coal-loading dock on Staten Island was destroyed today by a fierce fire that burned for 1½ hours.

Most of the town of St. George on the island was blanketed by dense smoke as land and marine firefighters fought the blaze in 93-degree heat on the hottest day of the year in New York.

Several coal barges and two loaded freight cars were destroyed. There was no reports of casualties. Damage was estimated at $500,000.

Ordered to the scene were all Coast Guard boats in New York, as well as land and marine firefighting equipment from Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Huge clouds of smoke drifted inland, "turning the day into night," a police report said.

The blaze, of undermined origin, broke out at 3:05 p. m. (EDT) and was put under control at 4:35 p. m.

The pier, an old-time open dock, was vacant when the fire started.

Hiss to Face New Grilling By U. S. Today

New York, June 26 (U.P.).—The third-act crisis in the Alger Hiss perjury trial is expected Monday, when Government prosecutors begin cross-examination of the former State Department official in an effort to prove him a liar.

Court observers believe the Government may uncork some new, startling evidence during cross-examination.

The first act of this court room drama unfolded slowly, as the former Communist courier Whittaker Chambers, supported by 33 other Government witnesses, testified against Hiss. Their testimony took three weeks.

The second act began on Thursday, as the 44-year-old Hiss, composed and self-confident, denied in minute detail the charges flung at him by Chambers.

Hiss is accused of lying to a grand jury when he swore that he never turned over secret State Department papers to Chambers for delivery to a Russian spy network and that he never saw his accuser after January 1, 1937.

Gubitchev, Shapiro Skipped As Coplon Trial Witnesses

By The Associated Press

The two men in Judith Coplon's life, who caused most of the shouting and screaming during her long and often dramatic espionage trial, apparently will not be asked to testify.

Attorneys listed yesterday the remaining witnesses they expect to call.

The roster did not include either Valentin A. Gubitchev, the Russian who was arrested with Miss Coplon, nor H. P. Shapiro, the man with whom she admits she spent several nights.

Archibald Palmer, defense attorney, said he expects to call only one more witness: Arthur Shimkin, employed by a New York book publishing firm. Palmer wants to support Miss Coplon's story that she had writing ambitions.

Writing Ambitions

The former Justice Department worker has testified that some of the papers found in her purse when she was arrested with Gubitchev March 4 were for use in connection with a book she had started writing. She also testified that she had discussed her writing ambitions with Shimkin.

John M. Kelley, jr., and Raymond P. Whearty, the prosecutors, named three Justice Department workers as rebuttal witnesses—William E. Foley, Miss Coplon's last boss, and Nathan Lenvin and Harold Koffsky, who used to work with her.

Miss Coplon testified that she was in love with Gubitchev, 32, a Russian engineer employed by the United Nations.

Attack on Defense

In an effort to weaken her love for Gubitchev defense, the Government brought Shapiro's name into the trial as another man in her life. Although she admitted spending nights in Baltimore and Philadelphia hotel rooms with the Justice Department lawyer, and others in his Washington apartment, she said it was a platonic friendship.

As she related it, they spent much of the time arguing about Gubitchev. Shapiro, she said, was trying to get her to forget about the Russian and marry him. But she said she didn't love Shapiro.

The trial of the former Justice Department political analyst may end this week. Then a Federal Court jury of eight men and four women will decide her fate.

She is accused of taking secrets from Justice Department files with intent to injure this country and aid a foreign power (Russia). She and Gubitchev also are under indictment in New York on espionage conspiracy charges.

Brazil Holds Russian In Revolution Plot

Sao Paulo, Brazil, June 26 (U.P.). Police announced today the discovery of a Communist revolutionary plot and the arrest of a Russian described as the "coordinator" of the movement in Sao Paulo.

The prisoner, whose name was given as Jorge Herlain, was described as "closely linked" with former Senator Luis Carlos Prestes, leader of the outlawed Communist Party.

Police said Herlain and other "subversive elements" had organized an underground movement intended "to prepare an atmosphere in Brazil favorable to civil war."

Romania to Push Sports

Bucharest, June 26 (U.P.). — The government will completely reorganize sports in Romania because "there are still class enemies on the playing field," the official Communist Party newspaper Scanteia reported today. A similar plan was announced last week in Czechoslovakia.

Miss Manning Wed to Florida Governor

Los Angeles, June 26 (AP).—The Governor of Florida and his lovely California blonde, 20 years his junior, were married today.

Fuller Warren and Barbara Jeanne Manning gave their vows before 200 invited guests who filled the candle-lit Westwood Community Church. The ceremony started 20 minutes late.

Outside, a curious crowd waited at the front of the stucco church for a glimpse of the silver-thatched 43-year-old Governor and his 23-year-old bride.

To the chagrin of California Chambers of Commerce there was nary a peep of sun for the wedding. The day was gray, with clouds shrouding the sky.

The Rev. A. J. Soldan, a Lutheran minister, read the ceremony, omitting the word "obey."

The bride, a sun-tanned beauty, wore white imported organdy over ice blue satin. The gown had a sweetheart neckline, buttoned down the front, and a very full-gathered skirt. She carried white orchids with feathered carnations.

The bridal couple planned to fly to Florida Monday for a brief honeymoon at Fort Walton, near Pensacola. The Governor said he must be back at his desk in Tallahassee in about four days.

Rankin Reported Planning Huge New Bonus Bill

By The Associated Press

Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) is quietly grooming a multi-billion dollar bonus bill as a follow-up to veterans' pensions legislation.

The chairman of the House Veterans Committee disclosed yesterday he may seek action at this session, but refused to tip off plans for bringing it before his committee.

Even as Rankin primed his bonus measure, some members of his committee privately voiced the belief there would be no more major veterans benefits reported out of the committee at this session.

An Administration Democrat, who asked not to be quoted by name, told a reporter that "in view of the national economy, there is a feeling it's time to stop."

The chairman has bottled up measures to extend "52-20" GI jobless pay beyond the present expiration date of July 25, terming unemployment payments "rocking chair money."

The bonus bill, Rankin said, "would deduct from the adjusted compensation all this sit-down money, and on-job training and college benefits."

Public, Private Building Shows Increase for May

By the United Press

Both public and private building increased in May but public construction made faster strides, the Commerce and Labor Departments reported yesterday.

Public construction in May by States, counties and cities increased 19 per cent over April to 457 million dollars. This was 31 per cent more than in May, 1948.

Private building was $1,111,000,000 in May, or 12.9 per cent higher than in April. This still was 9 per cent less than a year ago.

Fliers Hunt South Africa's Fabled 'Lost City' of Faruni

Johannesburg, South Africa, June 26 (U.P.).—South African air force planes prowled over steaming African jungles and parched deserts today in an attempt to locate the lost city of Faruni.

The aerial search was the beginning of the government's project to find the ruins of the ancient, fabled city and possibly a treasure in diamonds and gold buried there.

Reports from natives in the remote area claim the city sits at the junction of Cape Province and Southwest Africa and southern Bechuanaland. This is where the government is concentrating its search.

Bushmen claim the city contains statues similar to those of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. From Faruni's deserted ramparts they say a huge soapstone face looks eastward.

One favorite legend about the ruins says the city contains statues of a heavily ornamented white man bleeding to death.

Legend says the city was the principal fort in a series of defenses built by a fabulous black king in the Middle Ages. Other stories handed down through the generations say it may have been built by Chinese or Phoenician traders.

The government decided on its search when South African pilots during wartime training reported they had seen the ruins of a city in the middle of a wasteland that has not been charted for two centuries.

Local archeologists believe Faruni may have been the seat of Monomotapa, a sixteenth century chieftain known as 'Lord of the Water Elephants."

Opponent to Seek Housing Bill Delay

By The Associated Press

Amid victory claims for President Truman's housing legislation, an opposition bloc sought yesterday to delay launching the program until the Federal budget is balanced.

Representative Cole (R., Kans.) announced he will offer an amendment intended to forestall the Government's entering into any public housing contract during any year in which it operates at a deficit.

After a long and bitter debate, the House begins voting on the controversial housing bill today.

Scores of amendments and substitute proposals are pending. But Administration leaders claimed a good margin of votes to give Mr. Truman just about what he wants. The Republican opposition, aided by some Southern Democrats, is split between those who want a compromise housing bill and those who want no bill at all.

Moreover, a score or more Republicans probably will vote with the Administration-supporting Democrats.

Calls for Vast Program

The legislation calls for a vast program of slum clearance, publicly-owned housing for low-income persons, and farm housing aids. The cost is estimated by the sponsors as low as $7,500,000,000 over 40 years, and by the opposition, up to 20 billion dollars.

A big issue is whether the Federal Government should lay out billions for publicly-owned houses in the cities. The opposition is crying that this would be a big step toward socialism in America.

The Senate approved the housing bill on April 21, 57 to 13, but provided for construction of 810,000 units of public housing in six years instead of Mr. Truman's recommended 1,050,000 units in seven years.

Administrationists in the House will sponsor an amendment to make the House bill conform with the Senate figure. With this adjustment they are claiming victory by a margin of up to 50 votes.

Showdown Vote Wednesday

The final showdown vote on passage probably will not occur before Wednesday. How far the Cole proposal will get is uncertain. It would appear doubtful of success in view of claims of the bill's supporters.

When it resumes consideration of the housing bill today, the House will debate two substitute proposals.

One was offered Friday by Representative Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio), for 10 Republicans. It resembles the Administration bill in many respects, including a provision for public housing, but also proposes Federal assistance, through low interest rates and long term payments, to encourage construction of privately owned housing.

The other substitute awaiting action would eliminate the public housing feature but provide Federal help for slum clearance and for farm housing. It was offered by Representative Davis (D., Ga.).

Jam Catches Money Bills

ation bills, only four have reached the White House. These provide for the Agriculture Department, the Labor Department and Federal Security Agency, the legislative branch and the District Government.

Three others have passed both House and Senate, but conference differences are holding up final action. In this category are the civil functions bill, carrying many a congressional "pet" project, the State, Justice, Commerce Department' bill and Treasury-Postoffice appropriations. One or more of these may reach the President before Congress adjourns over the July 4 weekend.

But four of the biggest appropriation bills, involving nearly 30 billion dollars all told, haven't even passed the Senate and stand little chance of final action before July 1.

These bills, all tied up in the Senate Appropriations Committee after passing the House well ahead of schedule, carry funds for the National Defense establishment, foreign aid (ECA), independent offices and the Interior Department.

What's tying these up is the economy operation, largely concentrating on ECA and military funds. Administrator Paul Hoffman last week warned the Senate committee that ECA is already scraping the bottom of the barrel, but the committee appears bent on an economy gesture slightly topping the House cut.

A moderate cut in armed forces appropriations also appeared indicated, but economy forces were largely counting on a directed slash by the President in all appropriations as required by the McClellan resolution.

A petition move for the McClellan resolution, ordering Mr. Truman to cut congressional money bills 5 to 10 per cent below budget figures, now has well over a majority of the Senate signed up.

Senate Expenditures Chairman John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) said he expects to have 60 Senate signatures before he takes the floor today to urge action by the leadership.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) thus far has declined to call it up, terming it "buck passing" to the President.

McClellan may appeal to the Senate policy committee of both parties. If that fails, sponsors of the economy resolution predicted it will be tied to one of the last big appropriation bills as a legislative rider.

The House, which broke speed records this year by passing most of the big money bills before Easter, has voted nearly 34 billion dollars in 1950 appropriations. This is approximately $1,800,000,000 below Mr. Truman's budget, but Senate increases have cut deeply into the saving.

Having cut below House figures on only one appropriation bill—State, Justice and Commerce—Senate budget balancers are now banking on the "over-all" method.

Myers Sees Congress Staying On for While

By the United Press

Senate Democratic Whip Francis J. Myers said yesterday that Congress probably won't adjourn for some time to come.

In a radio broadcast over Pennsylvania stations, he told his constituents they would be reading "about the Congressional intention to go home and escape the heat," now that summer is here.

"I would discount that inside information if I were you," Myers said. "We are not going to quit until we have accomplished a lot more than we already have."

serve or maintain the property; or in the case of an apartment, if the change is reasonably required in order to operate the rest of the property; or where the improvement is consistent with local "practices and customs" of property management; or if the change would increase the rental value "in a normal market where free bargaining prevailed."

The orders permit ceiling boosts in these cases:

1. Where a "major capital improvement" is made, as distinct from ordinary repair and maintenance work. The local expediter will decide what is a "major" change.

This covers the building of a porch or patio; new plumbing, heating or electrical equipment; basements; landscaping; stoker installation; siding or insulation.

2. Where a "substantial increase" is made in services, furniture, furnishings or equipment; or where the living space was increased between mid-1947 and April 1, 1948.

This, Woods ruled, would cover garage or laundry privileges; maid or janitor services; painting or decorating; fuel, hot water, light, or refrigeration; garbage disposal; linen service; telephone service; added land or garden space; television antennae.

This order also would reimburse the landlord if, because substantially more persons were occupying the dwelling, his costs of water, fuel or electricity went up. But any children born to tenants are "not to be construed" as new occupants calling for a rent boost.

3. Where the local director finds that the rent, as frozen, is "substantially lower" than for comparable dwellings in the area.

4. Where a tenant who is authorized to sublet part of the property has increased the number of sub-tenants who are paying him.

The manual states: "It is the purpose of this provision to permit landlords to participate in the profits or consideration derived by tenants from sub-tenants."

the State or local administration of these services."

As for Federal aid to education specifically, he cautioned that:

". . . . we may be sure from past experience that complaints of State waste, inefficiency, or pressure groups will, sooner or later, result in drastic Federal controls. Moreover, the impelling forces within any Federal bureau will, sooner or later, break down any such limitations (as safeguards in the bill)."

Certain restrictions, Mr. Hoover wrote, should be placed upon funds granted to the poorer States as he suggested. These would include guarantees of minimum standards for teacher qualifications and pay, hours of instruction and facilities.

"An additional standard," he said, "should be that of nondiscrimination with reference to race or religion."

In addition to reduction in cost of the program, Mr. Hoover felt four positive advantages would result from his proposals. These were:

1. Limitations on increases in State and Federal costs of government through "unnecessary bureaucratic expansion."

2. Keep "the camel's head (of Federal control) out of probably 80 per cent of the Nation's educational tent."

3. Stimulation of "some of the backward States which have resources to meet the national standards."

4. Curbing "Nation-wide drives upon the Congress for new and increasing grants in aid."

"The whole problem," he declared, 'is how to remedy the situation without great injury to the entire social and political fabric of the Nation, including education."

Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Education Committee, a longtime sponsor of Federal aid to education, took a dim view of Mr. Hoover's proposals. Asked to comment on the letter, he said:

"It's perfectly easy to see why he was not reelected President. The American people do not want to follow the Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers."

Free Trade Unions Unite to Fight Reds

Geneva, Switzerland, June 26 (AP).—Representatives of free trade unions around the world united here today to battle communism in the labor movement.

Delegates representing 42 million trade union members voted to establish formally before the end of November an international body in direct opposition to the Communist-domniated World Federation of Trade Unions.

At the end of a two-day session the preparatory conference elected a 14-member committee to draft a constitution and make swift arrangements for a full dress meeting some time between November 10 and the end of the month.

When the final vote was taken the delegation representing the General Federation of Labor of Argentina had withdrawn. The Argentine delegation had protested the seating of Jacinto Oddone, representative of an opposition group who made a sharp attack on the federation yesterday.

In Veteran Firing

Union, Firm Ruled T-H Violators

By The Associated Press

Both a union and a company yesterday were held to have violasted the Taft-Hartley Labor Act in the firing of a returned veteran under a "maintenance of membership" contract.

A trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board, in a case occurring at Chattanooga, Tenn., ruled that the veteran was rehired as a "new employe" and was not required to maintain his previous union membership in order to keep his job.

One unusual aspect of the case was that the company delayed dropping the man as the union required under their contract until it got a ruling from a Tennessee State court that this would be legal under Tennessee's anticlosed shop law. The court held it was a contractual obligation.

The company is Combustion Engineering-Superheater, Inc. The union is Local 656 of the AFL boilermakers.

The veteran is Floyd Lee Thompson. He was behind in his dues and refused to pay a reinstatement fee of $50.

Examiner John H. Eadie held the company and the union guilty of illegal discrimination against an employe. He recommended that the company be ordered to take Thompson back and that the company and the union "jointly" pay him his back wages, minus whatever pay he has received from other jobs.

The case goes next to the five-man NLRB if any party objects to Eadie's ruling.

The Taft-Hartley Act permits "maintenance of membership" contracts. The question here was whether this contract obligated Thompson to be a union member.

A "maintenance of membership" contract does not compel workers to join a union, but it does say that those who are already members must remain so during the life of the contract, or lose their jobs.

Man Wounded Severely in Shooting Fray

Earl Robinson, 42, 915 59th ave., Seat Pleasant, Md., was in serious condition in Freedmen's Hospital yesterday with a bullet wound in the abdomen suffered in a fight late Saturday night.

Police charged Johnny H. Montgomery, 35, of 1766 T st. nw., where the shooting occurred, with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Commodore Snowden, 41 2306 I st. nw., was in Garfield Hospital suffering stab wounds which he told police he suffered in a fight with an unidentified man near 14th and Swann sts. nw., early yesterday. Police are seeking the man. Snowden was stabbed in the back, left side, and left arm.

Mrs. Geraldine Coleman, 27, 202 Seaton ct. nw., was treated at Sibley Hospital for a severely cut hand and bruises. Police were looking for her husband, Lonnie Coleman, 38, for questioning.

Education Aid Bill Red-Tagged, Archbishop Says

Los Angeles, June 26 (AP).—Archbishop J. Francis A. McIntyre hurled charges of Soviet influence "even in our Congress" today as he condemned the House bill of Representative Graham Barden (D., N. C.) providing Federal aid to education.

He spoke before the Catholic Youth Organizations Federation breakfast here.

"The policy of 'confuse and divide' as contained in the Barden bill is a flagrant example of the prevalence of Soviet influence—even in our Congress," he said.

Last Sunday Cardinal Spellman in New York described the education aid bill as "un-American and anti-Catholic" and asked that prayers be said for its Congressman author.

European Recovery On Upgrade, Bruce Says

Lille, France, June 26 (U.P.).—David K. E. Bruce, American Ambassador to France, said today European recovery is on the upgrade, despite the "campaign of systematic falsification of facts" directed toward the Marshall Plan.

Speaking in French at a banquet in his honor here, Bruce said, "Those who count on misery to reestablish their authority and ruin the democratic ideal cannot succeed. It is becoming more and more evident that those unfortunates who carried posters reading 'Down With the Marshal Plan' might just as well have carried some reading 'Long Live Misery.'"

24,000 Coal Miners Strike in Australia

Sydney, Australia (Monday), June 27 (AP).—Australia's 24,000 coal miners went on strike today.

They laid down their tools to press claims for a 30 shilling ($4.80) weekly increase in wages, and a reduction in hours from 40 to 35 a week.

The strike comes in mid-winter, when there are small reserves of mined coal.

It is estimated the general coal strike will put 500,000 out of work.

Area Towns Ballot Today For Officials

Town officials will be elected in Brentwood and University Park today, with the latter election of the "write-in" variety.

The terms of three councilmen have expired in University Park. Two of them, Dr. Charles E. White and Albert B. Heagy, have indicated willingness to serve again. The third, William Bowie, vice president of the Prince Georges Bank and Trust Co., has said he will not accept the office for another term.

The polls will be open in University Park Elementary School from 1 to 8 p. m.

Reelection of incumbents in Brentwood is assured since a provision in the town charter bars "write ins."

Mayor James L. Russell, 42, a structural engineer for the Federal Works agency, is candidate for his second consecutive term Councilmen seeking reelection are Elbert Brown in the first ward and J. Milton Stanford in the second ward. William Bischoff is seeking his third term as treasurer.

Voting hours are from 1 to 8 p. m. in the Brentwood fire house.

World War II Veteran Named By Md. VFW

Baltimore, June 26 (AP).—A veteran of World War II today defeated a World War I former serviceman for the post of commander of the Maryland Department, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Delegates to the VFW's twenty-ninth annual State convention here elected Francis J. Valle of Baltimore to succeed George E. Ridenour of Hagerstown, as State commander. Valle a veteran of World War II, served as senior vice commander of the VFW during 1948-49.

Loser in the contest for commander was Arthur P. Rainey of Baltimore, who saw service in World War I. Rainey also lost out last year when he was defeated by Ridenour by one vote for the commander's post.

The election and installation of officers climaxed the three-day convention which commemorated the VFW's fiftieth anniversary.

Other State officers named included: Ward W. Caddington of Silver Spring, senior vice commander; William P. McShane of Joppa, junior vice commander; Reginald H. Murphy of Baltimore, quartermaster; Albert W. Styles of Arbutus, judge advocate; Dr. Louis J. Kolodner of Baltimore, department surgeon, and the Rev. Thomas A. Whalen of Baltimore, chaplain.

The VFW auxiliary elected Mrs. Elisabeth H. Terrifaye of Baltimore to succeed Mrs. Mae Carey of Baltimore as State president.

Allegany County's 8000 Idle Draw Average of $21 Weekly

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

(Second of Two Articles)

Cumberland, Md., June 26.—The 8000 men and women drawing jobless pay in Allegany County are receiving checks averaging about $21 a week—less than half what they used to earn from private industry.

The money is coming from two sources:

1. Maryland State unemployment compensation (for about 5100 of the 8000). These checks average about $22.50 and are paid from funds raised over the last decade by a tax on the employers.

2. GI "readjustment" allowances, the so-called "52-20" benefits, averaging about $19.90 a week and paid to about 2900 persons. These checks were designed to get the ex-GI readjusted to civilian life. Today they are in effect straight unemployment benefits.

There are important differences. The State benefits run for a maximum of 26 weeks in a year and require regular employment the previous year before the benefits can be drawn. The benefit year begins April 1, so the last checks for those who have been drawing them all spring and summer will come in October 1. Most of them will end by Christmas.

The GI checks run for 52 weeks, but the law will expire July 25 unless Congress extends it—a good possibility. Since many of Cumberland's unemployed are ex-GI's they are eligible for either benefit. Most apply for the one likely to provide an income the longest time. If the GI law expires, those on its rolls will transfer to the State benefit system.

The State pays a larger weekly benefit, especially to the man with a large family. The State law recently was amended to give an extra $2 per child. Thus a man with four children could draw the maximum basic check of $25 plus $8 or a total of $33 a week.

An additional number of county residents are drawing unemployment benefits from the Railroad Retirement Board, whose payments are somewhat more generous. There is no local figure for the rail workers receiving checks.

Heart of the unemployment benefit system is the State set-up. This is one of the 48 State laws enacted to take part in the national unemployment compensation program first passed by Congress in 1936.

Under this system the employers began by paying 3 per cent of their payroll as a tax. Of this, 3/10 of one per cent went to Washington to administer the program. The rest went into the Federal treasury as a State trust fund. In recent years Maryland employers with stable employment records have had their tax rate reduced. In 1948, the Maryland tax averaged 1.2 for the reserve plus .3 for administration.

Today the Maryland unemployment compensation fund—the money piled up to be paid out in unemployment checks like those now flowing into Cumberland—totals about $7,500,000,000. Benefits drawn so far have made only a slight dent in the fund.

Federal Security Agency officials estimate there is now enough money on hand for all the 48 States to pay the maximum amount (which varies considerably from State to State) to about half the workers covered in the United States.

If unemployment should snowball, the fund obviously would be inadequate and direct appropriations from the Federal treasury as in depression days would be necessary. The fund was conceived as a cushion for just such periods as the Nation now is going through.

But what happens in Cumberland when the 8000 now on the rolls have drawn their last checks? What is Cumberland doing to help itself?

The local leaders, business, labor and government, have formed a "Cumberland Industrial Promotion Committee" in an attempt to lure new businesses into the area. So far, the results have been practically nil.

City and County officials have passed resolutions calling the situation to the attention of Maryland's Senators Millard Tydings and Herber R. O'Conor and Representative J. Glenn Beall.

Beall, whose home is Frostburg, a nearby Allegany County town, has been plugging for money to complete the Savage River dam, a flood control project halted by the war, and Congress recently voted $1,265,000. Other Federal money, for which the Congressman takes credit, also is coming into the community.

But these projects plus about $3,750,000 being spent on local school buildings will not be enough to absorb any considerable share of the jobless.

Need Felt For Extension

The result is a general feeling here on the part of business, labor and government that the State should amend the unemployment benefit law to extend checks beyond 26 weeks. This would require an act of the State Legislature and might also mean higher payroll taxes if no Federal money is turned over to the States.

Maryland figures show that in May more than 34,500 men and women were drawing the State checks, compared with 13,000 a year ago. The incease from April to May was almost 8000. Allegany County payments are about 20 per cent of all those in the State.

This county is a strongly organized union community, AFL, CIO and the independent railroad brotherhoods. There is some muttering today from business about too high labor costs and fears of outside concerns about locating in Cumberland.

But labor is doing some thinking of its own. Biggest union here is the CIO's Textile Workers Union of America, Local 1874, bargaining agent at Celanese. It is headed by Playford Aldridge as president and John G. Thomas as business manager.

Labor here cooperated last November to give Representative Beall, a Republican, his first defeat in his home county even though he won reelection. This "victory," along with labor's general awareness of its new political role, is likely to mean political action designed to elect candidates pledged to adequate and continued unemployment benefits, big public works projects and lots of Federal aid.

But those things take more time than Cumberland would seem to have.

Just as Labor Day is circled in red on the calendar of most economists as the day when the crucial test of the Nation's economy begins, so it is in this community. If there is a national upswing, business in general will improve in Cumberland and the unemployment problem will be eased if not immediately defeated.

But if there is no fall upturn, then this county is in for an unpleasant winter and a bleak Christmas.

Baltimore Cafe Man Shoots Bandit Dead

Baltimore, June 26 (AP).—A restaurant manager shot a holdup man to death today as the intruder was attacking him with a knife.

The dead man was identified as Tommy Covington, about 35, address unknown.

The restaurant manager, Gregores Konstandinidic, 43, was treated in Maryland General Hospital for slashes of the chest and left arm.

He told police the man came into the restaurant and odered a sandwich. When he was asked for money, the holdup man replied, "You'll get paid."

Outlook Called 'Black' in CTC Wage Dispute

Representatives of the Capital Transit Co. and its 4300 operators and maintenance men will meet once more at 2 p. m. today to try to settle their differences over terms for a new contract, or work out a procedure for arbitration.

With four days left before the current contract expires at midnight Thursday, company and union spokesmen agreed yesterday on one thing—that the outlook is "very black."

Strike Vote Expected

If there is no agreement by Thursday, a strike vote is expected at a membership meeting scheduled for that midnight by the union, Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America (AFL.) A strike would stop all local bus and streetcar transportation.

A company spokesman said yesterday that today's negotiation session will be a "review of all issues to see if there's some loophole that everybody can crawl into." Federal Mediator James A. Holden will be working with the two parties at the conference, to be held in the company offices.

Course of Negotiations

Original demands by the union of 25 cents an hour more than present scales of $1.45 for operators and $1.58 for top mechanics were said to have been reduced to 10 cents an hour after seven weeks' negotiation. The union also dropped other fringe benefits from their demands, it was reported.

The company wanted present pay scales to be continued, but also demanded certain operational changes designed to save some $500,000. Later, the offer was said to have included a 5-cent an hour raise, with the operational changes still asked.

Elder Gives Nuptial Tips

more than 3000 Adventists from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia, heard Elder E. F. Koch, pastor of the Richmond, Va., Seventh-day Adventist Church, warn that the "close of probation" for millions of people is near.

"A startled world," he said, "will suddenly realize that God's door of mercy is closed and that their lives are doomed."

He declared that those who are "not filled with the truths of the Bible will be under the control of the spirits of demons when the hour strikes."

Another speaker, Elder Arthur E. Lickey, of Los Angeles, Calif., a book editor for the Review and Herald Publishing Association, which is the denomination's official publishing concern, told his audience that the fundamental weakness of the world today is its unbelief in the truths of the Bible. He is the author of the Twentieth Century Bible course and also a new book "Ministry Laymen Movement," just off the press.

Scheduled as speakers today are Dr. C. E. Choffey, regional director of the Federal Security Agency, and Elder W. T. Smith, pastor of the Capitol Memorial Church, D. C.

D. C. Sizzles In 96 Heat

a. m. By 8 a. m., the mercury hit 80 and it climbed steadily upward to pass 90 at 11 a. m. After the high mark, it hung at 95 degrees through most of the afternoon.

Relative humidity was high in the early hours of the day. It declined substantially to a low of 44 per cent at 3 p. m., but then began rising again.

Metropolitan and Park Police said that in spite of the record high temperature, traffic and volume of park visitors Saturday and yesterday were "just about the weekend normal." Not many persons slept out Saturday night, Park Police said, apparently because the ground had been dampened by a shower late Saturday afternon. They expected many more to seek relief last night from hot apartments and rooms by sleeping under the skies.

War Records Keeper Leaves Post Thursday

Mrs. Finch

Mrs. Margaret M. H. Finch, the Nation's chief caretaker of records of the Revolutionary and 1812 Wars, will retire Thursday, Dr. Robert H. Bahmer, head of the National Archives, disclosed yesterday.

Mrs. Finch, widow of Dr. Erastus M. Finch, a Washington and Takoma Park physician, is completing 30 years of Government service which she began as a War Department clerk in 1919.

Most of her career—22 years—was spent in care of about 160,000 pension and bounty-land files of the Nation's first two major wars.

She began that duty in 1927 when she became chief of the Revolutionary and 1812 Wars section of the Veterans Administration. These records were transfered in 1940 to the National Archives and she continued in the same capacity there.

She lives at 8215 Roanoke ave., Takoma Park, Md.

"I'm now going to have fun," she said of the scheduled retirement. She is expecting as guests this summer her grandson, who recently was graduated from the University of Arizona, and her granddaughter. The granddaughter is coming from Germany where her father—Mrs. Finch's son—is stationed with the American Military Government.

Race Payoff Stirs Memories Of War I for Alexandrian

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Memories of a French battlefield where he was wounded more than 30 years ago, were sharply back in the mind of an Alexandria man yesterday after a racetrack payoff at Wilmington, Del.

Flem Burke, Public Buildings police sergeant, who lives at 3702 Mount Vernon ave., discovered among his Saturday track winnings an old-style two-dollar bill bearing notations apparently jotted down by an American soldier fighting in the same sector where Burke, himself, was felled by German shrapnel.

Although the writer's name was illegible, the notations showed his home to be in Normal, Ill., Burke said.

According to the jotting on the margin of the bill, it had been sent to the soldier by his mother, and was delivered October 31, 1918 "in the midst of the heaviest of German gunfire at the foot of Dead Man's Hill."

Dead Man's Hill, according to Burke, was in the Verdun sector not far from the point where he was wounded in the legs in July of the same year while fighting with the Third Cavalry.

Since the "king-size" bill obviously was a memento, its owner must have been hard-pressed and down to his last "deuce" to have wagered it at the mutuel window, Burke said.

The bill's new owner apparently fared much better. Burke collected a total of $129 for a $20 investment in the chances of Chains, which finished second in the sixth race.

Capitol View Man Held by Police on Slaying Charge

Harry DePollar, 46, of Capitol View, Md., was held by Prince George County police at Hyattsville on a murder charge yesterday following the death Saturday night of Thomas Tripline, 48, also of Capitol View.

Police said Tripline and DePollar were ni an argument Saturday. DePollar, they said, went to his home nearby, emerged with a 30-30 rifle and shot Tripline in the head. He died 90 minutes later at Prince Georges County General Hospital.

THE NEW AND IMPROVED*
INSECT-O-LITE

KILLS
FLYING MOTHS GNATS, MOSQUITOES, FLIES, SILVERFISH and literally hundreds of other common insect pests!

This revolutionary insect killer is the easiest, cleanest and most effective method of using powerful DDT in the home! Simple to use, you merely snap it over an ordinary light bulb, and it goes right to work spreading invisible but deadly insect-killing DDT.* It will not injure clothing, furniture or drapes and it leaves no oily film.

SNAP-ON SHADE
FITS OVER LIGHT GLOBE

*The Insect-O-Lite contains 70% by weight, of the new, improved super-powerful D-DT.

HERE'S HOW INSECT-O-LITE WORKS

INSECT-O-LITE KILLS INSECTS IN THESE TWO BIG WAYS . . . Insect-O-Lites are impregnated with powerful insect-killing DDT crystals* which vaporize and are dispersed invisibly through the room by the heat of an ordinary light bulb! You just snap on the switch and the amazing Insect-O-Lite goes to work in these two important ways: (1) ALL INSECTS ATTRACTED BY THE LIGHT CONTACT THE INSECT-O-LITE SHADE, ABSORB THE POWERFUL DDT CRYSTALS* AND SOON DIE! (2) THE HEAT FROM THE ORDINARY LIGHT BULB VAPORIZES THE DDT AND AIR CURRENTS DISTRIBUTE THE POTENT INSECT-KILLING CRYSTALS TO THE CEILING AND UPPER ROOM SURFACES, MAKING THEM A "DEATH TRAP" FOR INSECTS. They don't even have to contact the shade to absorb the DDT!
The length of time required for the Insect-O-Lite to reach its maximum effectiveness depends on how long the light bulb is left on and the size of the room to be covered.

Insect-O-Lite is perfect for living rooms, dining rooms, porches, patios, kitchens and bedrooms, dairy barns, chicken houses, any place where insects are a problem.

HOW EFFECTIVE IS INSECT-O-LITE?

Exhaustive tests, conducted by the internationally recognized laboratories of Triplett and Barton, Burbank, California, have proved that the Insect-O-Lite deposits super-powerful insect-killing DDT* to the ceiling and upper room surfaces. A famous New York entomologist and a famous American college whose names will be given on request, have demonstrated, in numerous tests, that the Insect-O-Lite effectively kills insects and yet is harmless to humans and warm blooded animals.

Order to Unmask Stirs Klan Revolt

Birmingham, Ala., June 26 (U.P.). A revolt in the ranks of the Alabama Ku Klux Klan shaped up today against the "public unmasking" directive issued by the chairman of the Klan's board of governors.

William Hugh Morris, a director of the Federated Ku Klux Klan of Albaama, Inc., attacked the order handed down last night by Dr. E. P. Pruitt, the chairman. Morris said Pruitt overstepped his authority in commanding Klansmen "to discard" their masks in public, and wear them only in private rituals.

Morris intimated other Klan officials agreed with him, and added fuel to the report that the KKK will make a court test of any anti-masking law passed by the Alabama Legislature.

Pruitt had only one comeback to Morris' blast. He said, "I am president of the Klan."

Senator Henry Mize, author of the anti-masking measure, said Pruitt's order will have no effect on his intention to rush the passage of his bill. It comes up in the Alabama house for debate and a final vote Tuesday, already having been approved by the Senate.

Scott Trial Opens Today At Roanoke

Roanoke, Va., June 26 (U.P.).—Lee Scott, 16-year-old choir boy goes on trial here Monday for the parish house slaying of Dana Marie Weaver, 16.

Officials said the public would be barred because Trial Judge Kirk A. Kuyk feared his court would be stormed by bobbysoxers.

Scott, a Jefferson High School athlete, is accused of bludgeoning the blonde girl and then strangling her to death in the kitchen of the parish house of Roanoke's Christ Espiscopal Church.

The tall, handsome youth will be tried in the small Hustings courtroom on the third floor of the Municipal Building, one story below the jail, where he has been held since his arrest May 10.

The courtroom has but 100 seats. Only those connected with the case and newspapermen will be admitted, a court official said, because the judge fears scores of teen-age friends of Dana Marie and Scott will try to crowd in for the trial.

Commonwealth's Attorney C. E. Cuddy said he planned to call 30 witnesses. He also was expected to spring results of "truth serum" tests on Scott, and findings in laboratory tests made of stained clothes officers found in Scott's closet.

A panel of 60 prospective jurors has been summoned, in addition to the regular June panel. Defense and prosecution agreed today that selection of a jury will be difficult because of the notoriety the case has achieved.

Glen Burnie Killer Hears Fate Today

Baltimore, June 26 (AP).—Thomas A. Edwards, 24-year-old sugar refinery employe, is scheduled to be sentenced Monday for the slaying of a young Glen Burnie couple. He faces a sentence of hanging or life imprisonment.

The three judges who convicted him on a first degree murder charge set the date for sentencing June 14, after the Baltimore Supreme Bench denied him a new trial on plea of his counsel that they had unearthed new evidence.

Edwards was convicted of the murder last September of John H. Mahlan, 25-year-old Glen Burnie postoffice worker, and Mary C. Kline, 18.

Mahlan and Miss Kline had gone out on their weekly date and Mahlan's blood-spattered automobile was found the next morning in a bean patch about 4 miles southeast of Glen Burnie. Bodies of the couple were found two days later, in a clearing 26 miles away just off Chesterfield rd. west of Annapolis.

Edwards, who worked at a Baltimore sugar refinery and lived with his parents in a community near Glen Burnie, confessed the slaying but repudiated his statement at the trial.

but his orders do not go so far as breaking up the machines. Several town police forces are expected to receive such orders.

Meanwhile, speculation is rife in the county over rumors that certain law enforcement officials may be indicated for income tax invasion in connection with gambling.

The rumors have become so loud that actual names are being mentioned in wider-spreading circles and action by the Circuit Court judges or the county commissioners may be taken within a short time.

The county grand jury remains in "recess" presumably to continue investigations into gambling activities in the county and possible connection of officials. The jury may return at any time and begin further deliberations.

Serious illness of State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie, however, may hamper the inquiry if the grand jury returns, but the court could name an acting State's attorney to serve during his absence. Bowie had been spearheading the gambling inquiry while the grand jury was in session.

Ruling Clouds Slot Machine Laws' Status

A court decision last week ruling Prince Georges County's slot machine law unconstitutional has aroused speculation as to the possible effect on similar laws in three other Maryland counties.

Legal authorities agree that while Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury's ruling applies only to Prince Georges, it constitutes a definite threat to slot-machine laws in Charles, Calvert and St. Marys counties.

An examination of titles to bills legalizing slot machines in the three counties showed they contain the same apparent shortcomings as those cited by Judge Marbury in the Prince Georges title.

Should the Prince Georges invalidation order remain in effect, or be upheld on appeal, the other counties would be open for successful suits to bar the devices.

The technicality on which Judge Marbury threw out the Prince Georges' law was the failure of its title to include any provision for repealing or modifying existing State gambling laws "inconsistent" with legalized operation of slot machines. The constitution, he pointed out, requires that the title to a bill describe the full purpose and intent of the law.

Titles to the slot machine bills in the three other counties refer only to licensing or taxing "coin-operated machines," but they make no reference to repeal or modification of the State gaming code.

As was the case with the Prince Georges measure, the texts of the other bills contain provisions exempting the slot machines from State gambling laws. However, Judge Marbury ruled this is not sufficient, since the constitution requires that the title must "fairly advise" the Legislature and the people of the real nature of the bill.

To invalidate the other bills, slot-machine opponents would have to start actions in each of the three counties. However, it was noted all three jurisdictions are in the Seventh Judicial Circuit, and would come before the same court that ruled against the Prince Georges measure.

Prince Georges County officials yesterday would give no indication whether an appeal is planned, but said the matter would be discussed in full when the commissioners meet at Upper Marlboro Tuesday.

24 Injured In Plunge of Guard Plane

Portland, Me., June 26 (AP).—A Maine National Guard transport plane plunged into the Fore River today, injuring all 24 persons aboard after going out of control in a Municipal Airport landing.

Twenty of the injured were members of the 195th Ground Forces Band of the National Guard. One was a member of the Regular Army and the other three comprised the C-47 crew. All were taken to hospitals.

The only one critically hurt was Harold Burrill, 28, of Bangor. He suffered an upper neck fracture and head injuries.

Most of the 24 plane occupants were from the Bangor area.

They were en route from Dow Air Force Base, Bangor, to Old Orchard Beach for the American Legion State convention parade.

The pilot, First Lieut. Edward Lent, 26, of Orono, said the plane's brakes failed to hold.

Less seriously injured bandsmen told of confusion aboard the plane as it bounced toward the river.

Instruments and parachutes went flying in all directions. Men were thrown upon each other into a wild tangle. Some of the injuries were caused by instruments hurled about the plane by the impact, passengers said.

U. S. Asks Watch on Luciano in Dope Drive

By the United Press

The United States has asked Italian police to keep a constant watch on Charles (Lucky) Luciano, onetime New York vice king, in a drive to break up transatlantic dope smuggling, it was disclosed yesterday.

Harry J. Anslinger, chief of the Treasury Department's narcotics division, made the announcement after the arrest in Rome of a New York man, identified as Vincent Trupia, who was allegedly carrying $500,000 worth of raw cocaine.

Anslinger said Trupia's arrest was part of an international crackdown being carried out by the United States in cooperation with several European governments.

He confirmed that Garland Williams, a special agent of the narcotics division, flew to Rome recently to confer with Italian authorities about maintaining a closer watch over Luciano "as well as a number of other well-known traffickers."

Anslinger said he had no information to support complaints, made by internation police in Rome, that the widely publicized arrest of Trupia Saturday night wrecked a careful plan to trap the leaders of the dope syndicate.

Uniform Traffic Laws

Washington has wasted no time in adopting a new uniform traffic code. The new laws just approved by the District Commissioners to go into effect September 1 are part of a Nation-wide movement initiated at the President's Highway Safety Conference in May, 1946. A local committee worked for two years simplifying and revising traffic rules to make them conform with the standards of the national uniform vehicle code. The revisions were then scrutinized to make sure that they were consistent. Meanwhile, the work of standardizing highway regulations has gone on elsewhere; the elimination of the antiquated right-turn hand signal in Maryland the other day is an example of the effect of the program.

With respect to the District, the new regulations will serve primarily to weed out ancient laws with no present applicability, to introduce more reasonableness into some traffic standards, and to make definitions more concise and complete. For example, the requirement for acetylene lamps on motor vehicles, on the books since horse and buggy days, is now eliminated; judges are given leeway in applying speeding fines under extenuating circumstances, and regulations governing emergency vehicles are liberalized. Even more important than the local streamlining, however, are the inroads which standardization is making on speed traps, brigandry by Justice of the Peace Courts, and similar abuses. A salutary effect of this praiseworthy movement is to enable motorists from anywhere in the country to know in advance just what highway regulations will govern their travels.

Sacrifice Hit

The chief item of business before the next meeting of the District Home Rule Committee may well be the erection of a monument to Congressman John L. McMillan of South Carolina. By a move that would have done credit to Machiavelli himself, Mr. McMillan has given new vigor to the local suffrage movement. Another brilliant coup of this type would probably put him in the running for the honor of being father of home rule in the Nation's Capital.

To be sure, there may be some who are disturbed by the unorthodoxy of Mr. McMillan's methods. But they are men of small imagination. To those who really understand the psychology of Congress his letter to an unnamed constituent in South Carolina must be regarded as a master stroke. If the Congressman had devoted all his valuable time during the present session to the cause of restoring a modicum of democracy in the District of Columbia, we doubt that he could have done better.

The baffling situation that confronted the statesman from South Carolina was this: Senator Kefauver's home rule bill had passed the Senate with so little opposition that it was not considered worth while to call the roll. With the President and House leadership in favor of it, the measure appeared also certain to pass the House if indifference and lingering hostility in certain quarters could be overcome. That is where Mr. McMillan took over. Heroically defying the opposition, he called a hearing for Tuesday of this week. But it was obvious that something more than a mere routine hearing was needed. The man of the hour would be one who could put the opposition in a ridiculous role—who could start this solemn city and its masters in Congress to laughing over the absurdity of maintaining the Nation's Capital as a little voteless island in a sea of democracy.

Mr. McMillan threw himself into this breach with a letter to a constituent that has seldom been surpassed in absurdity. All the South Carolinians living in Washington can vote in South Carolina, he says. Rough estimates give the District something more than 600,000 potential voters. Only a small fraction of them can vote in any State. Shall the hundreds of thousands of local residents who have no prospect of a voice in their government anywhere be kept in the status of political eunuchs because a few living here can vote elsewhere? This is certain to bring a thundering "no" from the citizens who testify this week.

More risible is the letter's assertion that, of less than a dozen persons who have written Mr. McMillan in favor of home rule, all but two or three were "people who had communistic tendencies and were interested in securing control of the Federal Government." It is not clear whether the list includes the President and Majority Leader McCormack. In any event, they are among the foremost sponsors of District home rule. But let us not miss the real genius of the McMillan letter. The very fact that it falls back upon an irresponsible smear has the effect of emphasizing how thoroughly washed up are the arguments of the opposition. We can only hope that Mr. McMillan's satirical coup will not reflect upon him personally. Doubtless, he realized that he alone among his colleagues was in a position to give the opposition to home rule the kiss of death. Let him be reassured that his heroic sacrifice of self will not be forgotten by the newly enfranchised citizens of the District.

Point 4 Program

President Truman has launched his "bold, new venture" for the development of backward countries by asking Congress to appropriate 45 million dollars to be used directly and in cooperation with the United Nations to provide technical assistance to such countries. This is a modest sum, and its expenditure for the indicated purposes would yield large dividends by enabling undeveloped countries to increase their production and raise their living standards through their own efforts. The potential benefits of shared knowledge of production techniques and American assistance and advice in improving sanitation, fighting disease and planning for the future would not be confined to the people of backward areas. As the President says, their awakening is "not only a promise that new and stronger nations will be associated with us in the cause of human freedom, but it is also a promise of new economic strength and growth for ourselves."

However, the success of our efforts will depend on the willingness and ability of the aided nations to help themselves after they have been provided with the tools of knowledge and shown how to employ them. Of course, they will need the assistance of foreign capital to develop their own resources, but theirs is the responsibility for creating the conditions of political and economic stability required to attract outside capital. If the United States were to insure private investors against risks of loss in backward countries resulting from expropriation, riots, revolutions and wars, it would put a premium on unsound ventures. Moreover, investments hedged about by guarantees of this kind would be private in name only.

As The Post said, when discussing a proposal to give similar comprehensive guarantees against loss to private investors in ECA countries, the necessary guarantees should come from the countries seeking the money, not from the country whose citizens provide it. There is some justification for insuring the convertibility into dollars of the earnings of American-owned enterprises located in countries that, through no fault of their own, are unable to provide the necessary dollar exchange. Otherwise the Government should confine its efforts in this sphere to the negotiation of intergovernmental agreements insuring fair treatment of American investors.

Because such treaties will not entirely eliminate risks of loss, President Truman proposes to stimulate a premature outflow of private investment funds by means of Export-Import Bank guarantees. This feature of his program appears to be thoroughly unsound. Even though the Export-Import Bank would have discretionary power to restrict guarantees or refuse to give them, it would be under tremendous pressure to relax its vigilance. The President evidently expects this plan for guaranteeing private investments to develop on a greatly enlarged scale. "If the demand for guarantees should prove large," he says, "and lending activities continue on the scale expected, it will be necessary to request the Congress at a later date to increase the authorized funds of the bank."

There is no way of knowing the cost to the Government of an insurance program of this kind but the huge losses of Americans who sent their money abroad during the 20s and the 30s emphasize the need of a cautious approach. If the taxpayers of this country were to carry the losses of such hazardous ventures, why should the rewards of risk-taking go to private citizens? The alternative is either direct Government investment in backward areas where private capital will not venture—a proposal that is unacceptable for many reasons—or a program of limited governmental aid, such as the President has outlined, that takes the form of exporting what he has called our "imponderable resources in technical knowledge."

Three-Day Coal Week

John L. Lewis is reported to have offered to send his miners back to work at the end of their 10-day vacation period, while contract negotiations are proceeding, provided the working week is limited to three days. Although this proposal runs counter to the UMW's traditional policy of refusing to work without a contract, it would have the great advantage of enabling Mr. Lewis to launch a long-cherished plan for "stabilizing" employment in the coal industry by systematically curtailing the output of all mines and spreading the work. At the same time, his bargaining position, weakened by overproduction of coal and sagging coal prices, would be strengthened by cutting down production while new contracts are under discussion.

The huge supply of coal now above ground is sufficient to keep industrial plants running about two months. Consequently, many operators, faced by the threat of competitive price cutting, would welcome proposals to reduce working time. However, an agreement between the UMW and the mine owners to cut down production and allocate the reduced output among the mines would constitute a restraint of trade that would be attacked as a violation of the antitrust laws. Apart from its more than doubtful legality an agreement of this kind would help to keep high-cost mines running and result in higher prices for a reduced coal output. Moreover, it would not provide any real solution of the industry's unemployment problem to put all the miners on part-time work instead of furloughing or dismissing some of them. Mr. Lewis virtually admitted as much when he broached the subject last fall by saying that "if there are only three days' work in this industry, we will all have three days' work. If we are going to starve in this industry at any time, we will just all starve together."

Obviously, the three-day week, work-sharing plan is not a program for stabilizing the industry, but simply a method of apportioning the loss of wages resulting from instability. By setting up a monopolistic form of employer-employe control, the plan would, in fact, put a premium on inefficient production methods, reduce the mobility of mine labor, and increase the inherent instability of an industry that is highly sensitive to fluctuations in general business activity.

Voting In Canada

It will be difficult, when the Atlantic Alliance is ratified, to call our northern neighbors allies. They are friends and neighbors of such standing that the change seems to put the relation in a too-formal framework. It is a friendship, we are afraid, which is too much taken for granted, so that the American people do not give to Canadian affairs the interest they deserve. For the tie with Canada represents the kind of friendship that, as Dr. Johnson observed, needs to be kept in constant repair. One method would be to give a thought today to the general election in Canada. In the last few months the people of Canada have been lashed into the partisan fever which quadrennially excites the United States. Yesterday the hubbub came to a crashing climax, and it is now stilled while the people exercise the privilege of casting their ballots—a privilege which the times have endowed with such high responsibility. In no two other countries is there such likemindedness in allegiance to the cause of representative and constitutional government.

However, in the form of representative government there is a difference, for the Canadians have a parliamentary system. That is to say, the party enjoying the preponderance of seats in the Legislature is likewise the party of the Executive, and it would be impossible under the Canadian system for a Premier to be of one party and the majority of the Legislature of another. In Canada the Liberal Party have been the "ins" in both respects for 14 years. This election was called by that party in order to allow the people to pass upon the Liberal Party as it was reorganized in its leadership or Premiership after the resignation of the highly respected Mackenzie King. Mr. King passed on his Prime Ministerial mantle to Mr. Louis St. Laurent, a newcomer in Canadian politics, who entered the King ministry as a wartime service. A successful lawyer, Mr. St. Laurent quickly showed his statesmanship in domestic affairs. Since the Liberty Party named him Prime Minister, he has demonstrated the same quality in the field of external affairs. Under him and his sagacious Secretary of External Affairs, Mr. Lester B. Pearson, Canada has been rapidly shedding its role at international gatherings as a compromiser and a formula-finder. Canada is nowadays showing a new initiative in issues of world concern—an initiative that stood out during the negotiations over the Atlantic Pact.

In this respect there is no reason to think there would be a change in Canada if Mr. St. Laurent were defeated. Canada is fortunate in the modern world in its choices. Many contests in postwar Europe have been between the force of light and the force of darkness. Of course, in the Canadian election the voter may have been harangued in these terms, but they are Pickwickian in application to the Canadian alternatives. The chief opposition in Canada is the progressive Conservative Party under the vibrant leadership of Mr. George Drew. These are the truly national parties on the ticket, though the third party of note, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, is striving in a manner familiar in American politics to bring farmers and workers together in a national movement. For all practical purposes, however, the contest is Liberal vs. Conservative, and millions of Britons will look across the sea with a good deal of nostalgia and envy over this traditional division. Even more narrowly the election is said to be between the personalities of Mr. Drew and Mr. St. Laurent—one an old hand in politics, native of Ontario, and the other, the first Prime Minister since the famous Sir Wilfred Laurier to hail from Quebec. Mr. Drew has the mass appeal of an old campaigner, and has the advantage, as all "outs" have, of attack—for errors made and liberties taken by a bureaucracy which has been entrenched in power for 14 long years. With the memory of the polls still fresh from last November's unpleasantness, we will refrain from giving the chances, but the verdict, whatever it is, cannot be one which will slow down the growing together of Americans and Canadians.

White House Marriage

Your issue of June 22 carries the statement that "Frances Folsom Cleveland was the first lady to be married in the White House."

Permit me to state that in 1912 I had the pleasure of lecturing in Williamsburg, Va., and of meeting the president of William and Mary College. He was the son of John Tyler, who became President of the United States upon the death of William Henry Harrison.

Mr. Tyler told me that one day his father, President Tyler, took a ride down the Potomac with United States Senator Gardener of New York State, who introduced him to his niece, a Miss Gardner, also of New York State. As a result of this chance meeting President Tyler married Miss Gardner in the White House a few months later. President Tyler was a widower when he entered the White House and had seven children also by his first wife.

Police Courtesy

Your issue of June 22, carried a story concerning Senator Margaret Chase Smith's complaints to the District Committee that her administrative assistant, William C. Lewis, jr., was not given the proper courtesy by police officers of the Third Precinct.

The matter progressed so far that Senator Smith's office was calling the Third Precinct to ask, "What happened to the police private?" It seems that it is expected the police private will be severely disciplined just because he was doing his duty in enforcing the law. Surely Senator Smith does not expect any such special courtesies.

I have had occasion to visit the Third Precinct regarding two traffic violations. Each time I found the officers extremely courteous and I might add very efficient in their duties of apprehending lawbreakers. I was very impressed with Captain Richett's pleasant and courteous manner and believe Senator Smith is asking just a little too much.

Threat To Free Press

The conservative press, controlled by a small minority and serving vested interests, is conducting a campaign to obstruct President Truman's Fair Deal. The post-election diatribe of frustrated publishers and editors tends to pervert the true meaning of democracy and freedom of the press.

The Commission on Freedom of the Press concluded in its report that freedom of the press "is in danger for three reasons:

"First, the importance of the press to the people has greatly increased with the development of the press as an instrument of mass communication. At the same time the development of the press as an instrument of mass communication has greatly decreased the proportion of the people who can express their opinions and ideas through the press.

"Second, the few who are able to use the machinery of the press as an instrument of mass communication have not provided a service adequate to the needs of the society.

"Third, those who direct the machinery of the press have engaged from time to time in practices which the society condemns and which, if continued, it will inevitably undertake to regulate or control.

"When an instrument of prime importance to all the people is available to a small minority of the people only, and when it is employed by that small minority in such a way as not to supply the people with the service they require, the freedom of the minority in the employment of that instrument is in danger.

"This danger, in the case of the freedom of the press, is in part the consequence of the economic structure of the press, in part the consequence of the industrial organization of modern society, and in part the result of the failure of the directors of the press to recognize the press needs of a modern Nation and to estimate and accept the responsibilities which these needs impose upon them."

Oppenheimer Case

After reading Joseph Alsop's article of June 20 on Dr. Frank Oppenheimer, the only deduction would seem to be that the latter is more sinned against than sinning. But is that really so? Just how does Mr. Alsop explain why this scientist, with his keen intellect, was unable to perceive what the ordinary patriotic American citizen has been able to discern with a little thought, that communism is a rotten, treasonable conspiracy to overthrow our Government and change our democracy into a heartless totalitarian slave state?

To be sure he recanted later and left the party, and that is to his credit, but the fact remains that he was at one time an active Communist, and as such he deserves the public opprobium that has been visited upon him. Mr. Alsop should reserve his eloquent apologia, it seems to me, for worthier subjects. P. J. M.

"Pushkin's Progress"

May I take a few exceptions to your interesting editorial of June 19 "Pushkin's Progress."

To begin with you call Pushkin "an imitator of Byron." This he never was. It is true, of course, that in his early youth he had been impressed by Byron's rebellious muse, and it was partly under this influence that he wrote his Caucasian Captive, The Fountain of Bakhchissari and the Gypsies. Yet even in these still immature works the pacific strain in Pushkin's lucid genius clearly overcame the Byronic spell. And it is hardly necessary to argue that in the four last cantos of Eugene Onegin, Pushkin's masterpiece, there is no trace of Byron left. Nor is there anything Byronic in The Captain's Daughter, Coq d'Or, The Queen of Spades, Poltava and The Bronze Horseman.

As to Boris Godunov, it should be observed that Pushkin wrote this tragedy before "he was forgiven by Nicholas I" in fact during the reign of Emperor Alexander I.

However, I fully share your astonishment at the fact that Stalin & Co. should be honoring the memory of Pushkin, the spiritual aristocrat, who would have been their bitterest enemy.

High School Cadets

I am not surprised the high school boys will not be cadets, the way the women and girls strut their so-called cadet stuff. Our educators should restore proper training for the girls along feminine lines. Drop the girl cadets from our schools. Then employ first-class military instructors for the cadets. Give our boys a chance for real military instruction in the cadets. The uniforms should be furnished. MRS. 3. G. McILWEE.

Evaluation Of FBI Reports

The current self-exposure of FBI "reports" is no surprise to Government officials, including military, who have long feared that "FBI procedures will come into the open some day and blow up." Excuses, such as have appeared in your columns, that the FBI reports "were unevaluated because expected to be kept confidential" do not impress experienced officials. "Evaluation" is the hoariest of the false whiskers on a situation they have long had to deal with.

The situation has not improved much in 30 years, in my casual observations of one phase—FBI reports on the qualifications of military personnel. Serving overseas in the recent war, I have seen colonels turn profane or speechless over a Pentagon memo transmitting an FBI adverse report, usually on the "previous civilian activity," of some subordinate officer whose worth they thought had been tried in two years of combat.

Those 1943-45 outbursts sounded familiar, as witness an instance which nearly embarrassed me in 1918, while commanding a small operational unit under G2 at Pershing's GHQ in France.

During the height of the Argonne Battle the general's aide sent for me one night and threw over a paper "from Washington, adverse report on two of your officers."

The one page memo said that investigation of the two named officers' previous civilian occupation disclosed that they might engage in subversive activities. It warned against placing them in key posts affording access to classified documents.

Investigation disclosed both had been employed by a paper published in New York called the New Republic, which paper was exhibiting pronounced Bolshevik trends. Attachments were first the Department of Justice investigation report—a hash of published fact, scary gossip and balderdash evaluation — and, second, New Republic clippings of articles by William Hard criticising certain War Department policies.

I had the two in key posts, one in Paris, one in London. At Chaumont I had no file of the New Republic to prove how fanatically it was supporting the war. Worst was the atmosphere of urgency, snap decisions being made hourly while GHQ labored to keep up with the battle raging not so far north.

Desperately I asked the aide to phone a corps headquarters up front: "You can talk to the man who founded the New Republic, Maj. Willard Straight. He is so much a Republican he opposed the reelection of the President. He is a member, on leave, of J. P. Morgan's."

The aide relaxed, thought I'd know the answers, scrawled "No action, ALJ" across the memo., and cussed Washington for trying to tell us how to fight the —— war.

So I saved my two subversives, Capt. Walter Lippmann, known since to Washington Post readers, and Lieut. Charles Merz, for years now editor of the New York Times. The two of course were not shown the derogatory report.

Thar's gold in them thar mountainous FBI, files, including fool's gold and gold brick.

Matter Of Fact

Hope

BATAVIA, DUTCH EAST INDIES—Batavia is an utterly characterless colonial town of unimaginable stuffiness, which boasts the most inedible food, the most outrageous prices and the most tireless mosquitoes in the Orient. Yet there are two things here which, to the weary traveler from other parts of Asia, make all the difference. The first of these unexpected phenomena is an actual, solid, understandable, constructive American policy. The second is simply hope in the air.

There is hope here—good, solid hope—of a final settlement between the Dutch and the Indonesians. This settlement would transform a huge area in southeast Asia, probably the world's richest area in natural resources, into a great, sovereign, non-Communist state. It is almost impossible to exaggerate the importance of such an event to the whole future of Asia, and indeed of the world.

The drama which is being played out here may yet end in tragedy. But a happy ending is ultimately far more likely. To understand why, it is necessary to know something of three of the principal actors in the drama—a Dutchman, an Indonesian and an American.

THE DUTCHMAN is H. J. Van Royen, a thoughtful, fair-minded, highly intelligent diplomat who has spent much of his life in the United States. Before he arrived a few weeks ago, Dutch policy here was largely in the hands of the high commissioner, Louis Beel, a conservative who looks a good deal like Senator Robert A. Taft.

Beel was mainly responsible for the "second police action" last winter, when the Dutch tried to crush Indonesian resistance once and for all. This was a brilliant military operation. But it was political insanity. It confirmed the Indonesians' worst fears. And, perhaps more important, it forced the United States to make up its mind. Beel has now resigned, in protest against the new Dutch policy which Van Royen has brought with him from Holland.

The Indonesian actor in the drama is Mohammed Rum, the leader of the independence movement with whom Van Royen has been negotiating. He is a small, shy, brilliant man, with a game leg (he was shot during the early fighting) and the jug ears, the pointed face and the sharp brown eyes of a particularly shrewd mouse. The third actor is the American, H. Merle Cochran, of the United Nations Commission—a large, pink, clever man who suffers the tropical heat uncomplainingly despite his vast bulk.

THESE THREE MEN, the Dutch diplomat, the small Indonesian, and the large American, have only one thing in common. All three—and the governments they represent—now want the same thing. They want a settlement in Indonesia which, while protecting Dutch economic interests, will lead to a transfer of sovereignty from Holland to a new state—the United States of Indonesia. This is the new policy which Van Royen has brought with him from Holland (although the Dutch, with more or less straight faces, deny that it is new). And this new policy springs very largely from the fact that the United States, which for a very long time really had no policy in Indonesia, has at length decided that a free Indonesia is in the interests of the United States and of the whole Western world.

Van Royen and Rum, tactfully but tirelessly prodded by Cochran, have accordingly reached a preliminary agreement. This provides that the Indonesian leaders will return to their former capital, Jogjakarta; that there will be a cease-fire, and that the Indonesians will then fly to The Hague to work out with the Dutch the terms of the transfer of sovereignty to the new Indonesian state.

Clearly this is no more than an agreement to try to agree. Similar agreements have been reached by the Dutch and the Indonesians before, and they have always ended in a bloody shambles. There are still great dangers, which will be considered in a forthcoming report in this space. Nothing is certain until there is a final settlement.

Yet there is one new element in the Indonesian situation. This is the quiet, friendly pressure which the United States is now effectively bringing to bear on both sides. Without this pressure, the accumulated bitterness of the postwar years would have made it impossible for the Dutch and Indonesians even to start toward settlement. The American pressure will continue. And this is the basic reason why a final settlement here appears ultimately inevitable, although a good deal of blood may be shed on the way.

A FREE, NON-COMMUNIST Indonesia is the best, and perhaps the last hope in southeast Asia. It is pleasant to be able to report that this hope exists, and that a wise and well executed, if belated, American policy is in large part responsible for its existence. Despite the contrary view in some Washington quarters, having a policy is often a good plan.

Today and Tomorrow

The We-Or-They Fallacy

IN MOSCOW and in the Western capitals there is agreement that the tension has become relaxed though none of the great issues of the conflict has been settled. What has happened?

LIPPMANN

According to Pravda the tension has become relaxed because of (1) "the people's peace movement throughout the world," which is pushed by the Soviet Union, (2) the proposals advanced by the Soviet Union, (3) the sharpening of world economic difficulties.

According to the Western briefings the tension has become relaxed because of (1) the people's liberation movements against Soviet tyranny, (2) the successful policies of the Western governments, and (3) the sharpening of economic difficulties in the Soviet orbit.

A STUDENT of history, who has examined the course and the outcome of other cold wars between powers that have irreconcilable ideologies, might, I venture to think, suggest a rather different explanation. It would be that in these cold wars there comes a time when, though the conflict is unsettled, the world has outgrown it. Events develop and new forces appear. They burst the stereotyped formulae of the cold warriors. They confound both their hopes and their fears, and present situations which are novel and different. The old codgers go on munching their chestnuts and arguing about the latest dispatches from the Battle of Bull Run.

Something of that sort has, I strongly suspect, been happening for some fairly considerable time, and is the underlying reason why at Paris nobody wanted to quarrel very much or to settle very much. The course of events in Europe, in Asia, and throughout the world has developed in ways which make many of the stereotyped formulae of the conflict not merely irreconciliable but irrelevant. They have become irrelevant because, over increasingly large areas of the globe and for more and more people, what M. Vishinsky might propose, or what Mr. Acheson might propose, or what M. Vishinsky and Mr. Acheson might conceivably agree upon, is no longer decisive, and not necessarily even very influential.

IN THE last analysis it is, it seems to me, because the power of the Big Four to shape events is contracting that the tension between them is relaxing. It is their diminishing control over Germany, over eastern Europe, over Japan, over China, over southeast Asia, over the Middle East which explains why they are no longer trying very sincerely to settle and are no longer disposed very fiercely to quarrel. The realization has reached the inner councils on both sides that they can no longer expect to decide the future in these contested areas, no matter who "won" the cold war.

To be sure, Messrs. Vishinsky, Bevin, Schuman and Acheson are still the Foreign Ministers of great powers. But they are not as Churchill, Stalin, and Roosevelt thought they were, and in war time actually were, the masters and leaders of the whole world. The power which was centralized in the war coalition is becoming so dispersed that the world can no longer be organized for a world settlement by the Big Four nor aligned into two blocs clearly separated in their political allegiance and by their ideological convictions. The world is much too complicated, human nature is much too contrary, to be explained any longer by the simple theories of the cold war, or governed by the strategic notions of the cold warriors.

SO AS the developing realities in Europe and Asia emerge through the fog, there will, I believe, gradually go out of fashion a mode of interpreting events which, though it had practical importance at one time, no longer fits the facts. It is the we-or-they formula: the theory that every country is, or will be, with Russia or with the Western powers, is or will be "Communist" or "democratic."

This formula is now a snare and a delusion. Applied to Germany, applied to Japan, applied to China, applied to the primitive peoples emerging from the old colonial empires, it explains nothing that is really important. As an estimate of the situation on which to base a policy it is so misleading that as long as we cling to it we shall not be able to arrive at a German, a Japanese, a Chinese, or an Asiatic policy that is effective abroad and commands confidence at home.

Text of Archbishop Beran's Pastoral Letter Read in Czech Churches

Prague, June 26 (AP).—Following is the text of a pastoral letter recapitulating the Roman Catholic Church's side of Czechoslovakia's state-church fight, as issued by Archbishop Josef Beran and his bishops and read today in the nation's Catholic churches:

DEAR FAITHFUL:

In these overwhelmingly serious times of our religious and national life we turn to you with this letter of the right-teaching church.

Love for nation and for the people of Czechoslovakia leads us to speak in these decisive days, in which we have become witnesses to attacks on the unity and leadership of the Catholic Church here. To know where the truth and right and your place in the church and nation lie, hear the voice of your pastors who, being conscious of responsibility before God and the conscience of the whole world, after deliberate consideration cannot remain quiet.

We have all been witnesses lately to a widely based action the aim of which is to force Czechoslovak bishops to come to an agreement with the state. As in our public, we also are of the opinion that relations between church and state are discordant and painful. This situation is surely unnatural, for both societies should complement each other and the present situation does not contribute to general public peace nor the internal peace of the faithful.

The worst of it is that many faithful Catholics suffer spiritually, as they sincerely love both their church and their state and are filled with fears for their future.

This causes us bishops, who are ordained by God as the guardians of the Commandments of Christ and are responsible before Him for the saving of our souls, no little pain.

It pains us all the more that all responsibility for the failure in negotiations is put by people, who are not sufficiently informed, upon us to whom your eternal and temporal welfare is the greatest treasure for which we are ready to sacrifice everything.

WE UNDERSTAND your natural right—that you wished to be informed truthfully, also from our side. Having no other possibility of presenting our case, we are endeavoring to do so, as our conscience bids us, by this pastoral letter, imploring God that the voice of the pastors reaches your hearing and that it be heard with credence and is rightly comprehended.

We also, the guardians of the truths and of the Lord, consider a sincere and just agreement with the state to be of no small importance. We cannot be indifferent as to whether our circumstances be favorable to the development of the Christian life or not. For, after all, the hindrances which today stand in the way of Christian thought in civilization and in everyday practical life are known.

We know well how many rights you have been deprived of, just as you are acquainted with the adversities which the church has had to go through lately.

We have always been aware of the burden of responsibility for the saving of your souls before God. We have always endeavored and we still endeavor today, even if only with small hopes of success, to defend and ensure the sacred rights of you Christians as free citizens of the state, as is naturally demanded by God's order.

To these humanitarian and commonly recognized rights of man belong not only the freedom of privately held religious convictions and the freedom to execute religious rites, but also the free realization of the principles of this faith as the norm of life of individuals and society—and this without fear of losing personal freedom, civic equality and the endangering of the rights of existence.

FOR the realization and ensuring of this religious freedom for Catholics it is the church's conception, by the ordinance of God, that these further conditions are necessary prerequisites: The recognition of the authority of the Holy Father as the highest visible head of the church and recognition and respect for the authority of his bishops.

The nonrecognition of this fundamental principle means that the Catholic Church as Christ wanted it is not recognized and that every action taken apart and against the will of the bishops, connected with the Roman Pope, disturbs the church's basic structure, disrupts its unity and necessarily leads to its destruction.

Further basic conditions for the recognition of the rights and freedom of the church, stemming from natural law, are:

1. Respect for the sovereign right of parents over the education of their children. That means education in school and also outside school.

2. Recognition of the family as a sacred tie, and the rights and duties stemming from this.

3. The right of the faithful to assembly in free congregations and organizations.

To these belong also the conditions of free religious life, which otherwise would be unattainable for the Communist or the individual. These conditions include the necessary number of church schools, educational and social and charitable institutions, cultural and philantrophic institutions, sufficient facilities for printing periodicals and books and free and unlimited access to all possibilities of social and cultural life.

FINALLY—Financial means and material security for these institutions and establishments is also necessary, as without them it would not be possible for the church successfully to develop this activity for the welfare of our people and to save church buildings from deterioration and destruction.

All this we once had to the necessary extent and all this we have been deprived of lately.

In difficult circumstances, with many hardships, the church had built—with extreme sacrifices from your will and your means, for you and your children—social and educational institutions, schools, seminars, its presses, and an organization of societies. All these formed conditions for the spiritual life.

And what has become of all this in this short time? We need not put before you, dear Catholics, special proofs of this. Look around you. Follow what is happening and you will easily come to the conclusion that the Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia has received a very bitter reward for its hundreds of years of service to the nation, for its cultural and charitable activities, for its loyality to the people, for its fearlessness and suffering during the (German) occupation.

It stands here today—robbed, deprived of the majority of its freedoms and rights, dishonored, soiled, persecuted secretly and openly.

ONLY observe how the church is faring in Czechoslovakia at the present time. A concerted campaign is waged against it on the radio and in public proclamations, especially against the Holy Father and the bishops, who are its God-ordained heads. The sacred character of the family and the sovereign rights of parents to the education of their children are wilfully undermined.

All the ecclesiastical press, with a few completely insignificant exceptions, has been stopped. Even the official gazettes of the bishops, which informed priests also of important state directives, have been stopped. Instead, the Ministry of Education, Science and Art has published the so-called Gazette of the Catholic Clergy, which is not church indorsed and is edited against the will of the hierarchy. Although this so-called gazette is intended for Catholic priests, it is directed by non-Catholics in an antichurch spirit and attempts to govern directly by state organs affairs which are wholly ecclesiastical and thereby attempts to exclude the bishops from practicing their rights.

Every Catholic book which is to be published—even prayer books—is subjected to preliminary state censorship.

State plenipotentiaries are planted in Catholic publishing houses. An interdiction of assembly and schooling of Catholics outside churches was edited under the threat of prosecution.

Even the fate of church buildings, as was demonstrated by the forced inventory of ritual objects and sacred vessels, is, it seems, insecure.

The church is deprived of the last remnants of its property. Not even the minimum laid down by the law is respected.

In many cases the paying of the state stipend of priests was stopped.

Church schools practically no longer exist and the fate of the few remaining is painfully insecure, which causes suffering to pupils and parents. Pressure was even brought to bear upon the parents to take their children out of church schools, and this under a direct threat of consequences.

Teachers of religion are tested ideologically and are given directives on how to teach religion in the materialistic spirit.

ALL religious education of youth in societies, eucharistic circles, et cetera, was in many places forbidden under punitive threats and is consistently made impossible by the fact that the state has taken a monopoly on materialist school and extracurricular education, so that education in the Christian spirit is made impossible and considered as practically illegal.

In this respect, we have come so far that even in theological schools lectures of so-called social science were instituted whose aim it is to bring about that even theological students should be educated in the materialistic ideology.

An inventory of all church property, even church collections, was ordered, quite illegally. With direct inspection, such inventories were carried out in many cases; they were anti-constitutional searches.

Consistent attempts are made to deprive church buildings of their religious missions, especially by the taking over of monasteries and institutions for the education of clerical and monastic youth.

Especially in Slovakia some monastic houses were forcibly cleared out and the priests taken away in trucks.

The Ministry of Interior gave instructions to the regional command of the state security (police) how to deal with the church and its members.

In some places even the practising of religious rites has already been forbidden. In many places religious processions were made impossible or were misused for irreligious purposes.

THE conference of bishops in Doini Smokovec, which was to have taken a stand on the demands of the government, was broken up when listening devices were discovered in the conference room. The Ministry of Interior was asked to make an inquiry but up to now no satisfactory answer has been forthcoming.

The latest conference of bishops in Prague was disturbed by security organs.

At the same time the Prague consistory was occupied by state officers and the archbishop's residence put under secret police surveillance, so that the freedom of the chairman of the bishops' conference was totally restricted. These restrictions represent extreme breaches of constitutional freedoms and many of the still existant laws. On the whole it can be said that outside the church any religious activity is impossible and many fear to visit churches lest they be accused of reaction and fear the loss of their means of existence.

It is a certainty that by these measures conditions are created which are not only in defiance of the rights of God but are also opposed to the natural and commonly recognized rights of man.

Judge for yourselves, dear Catholics, after ascertaining these facts whether the state was in any way harmed by the church or whether just the opposite is true.

After all, the whole affair of an agreement between church and state would actually have been a rather simple matter if it had not been for the fact that the state first harmed the church and deprives it of the majority of its rights.

All this organized calling for an agreement would have been quite superfluous if government personages, on their own initiative, had not interfered before the start of negotiations in church freedoms and rights and, formed, by this one-sided action, a painful situation in which the church was deprived beforehand of that which was supposed to have been the subject of the agreement.

So in reality the church was deprived of all possibilities of successful negotiations and given this choice: Submission to dictatorship or persecution.

IN SPITE of all these painful realities the Czechoslovak episcopate was always willing to negotiate and really did negotiate through its delegated representatives. It made extreme sacrifices to attain, at last in the most basic things, some regulation of affairs and to ensure its faithful at last the most conditions of religious life.

It (the episcopate) always found out, to its great pain, that in spite of all its good will this could not be done, except for the price of fundamental concessions and the price of misusing the church against its Godly mission.

At the some time, during the negotiations, the church was frequently treated in a hostile way which consistently undermined the confidence of the bishops in the success of the negotiations.

Ask yourselves this question, dear Catholics:

Could we bishops be satisfied with all this and accept every demand which is in defiance of the laws of God and humanity?

Could we approve, before our faithful people and before the whole world, every development, even if it was not in accordance with the spirit of the teachings of Jesus Christ?

Indeed, with gladness we shall render under Caesar the things which are Caesar's but would not be possible to sacrifice to him that which is God's because it behooves us better to obey God than man.

THIS negative attitude of the state toward the church cannot even be justified by the allegation that the bishops refused a clear statement of loyalty to the republic, because such statements are not in accordance with the truth.

We declare that we were always loyal to the republic. We have stressed this many times and it can be deduced from the oath we undertook when we assumed office. A loyal attitude towards the republic is, therefore, a matter of course for us and we are sure to remain faithful to our oath. Therefore we have always demanded from our clergy that they refrain from any political activity, especially from any illegal and anti-state activity.

But we cannot remain quiet when the rights of the holy church are violated and when political power is being misused against it.

If, therefore, we defend, as is our duty, the rights of the holy church we in no way want to harm the interest of the state.

On the contrary we do it in the interest of the state itself and for the welfare of our dear nation.

Most painful is the fact that we have no way of defending ourselves against these gross and untrue attacks. All manner of attempts are being made to force us out of our pastoral offices and the conduct of the church is being taken over by unbelieving people, people who have broken away from the church and those who have no right, no competence and no church missions.

Nothing else remains for us but to waste our energy and time with unceasing protests and efforts against the confiscation of church institutions, schools and monasteries, against trampling of all church rights and religious freedoms—protests which nobody answers, which nobody takes any notice of and which have no practical results.

IN THE present affair it is, therefore, not a matter, as we have stated before, of a lack of positive attitude of the church toward the state. It is not a matter of reaction, because the form of government and regulation of social life is not the main subject of our interest.

We must, however, be interested whether this form is favorbale to the development of the religious life and whether it is possible to bring such a social reconstruction into harmony with the teachings of Jesus Christ.

It is not even a matter of inclination toward capitalism, for we know that not even a liberal-capitalistic society corresponds with all the ideals of Christianity, and capitalism has several times been condemned by the church.

You, yourselves, know best that your present bishops are not capitalists. They certainly would be better off today if they were willing to choose the path of Judas.

We wish our working people all the improvements in social standards.

We only wish that their standard of life improve and that, together with the growth of their material welfare, favorable conditions be created for the perfecting of moral and religious life.

The seriousness of the times makes us act in absolute loyalty to principles and consistency in negotiating. Indeed, this is a matter of a consistent, well-planned and steadily applied persecution of the Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia.

NOT a whit of this can be changed by the resolution passed, on a plan prepared beforehand, at the meeting of the so-called (government-sponsored) Catholic Action in the Municipal Palace in Prague on June 10, 1949, even if it promised loyalty to the Holy Church, recognition of the Holy Father as its visible head and submission to him in matters of faith, morals and church discipline, and recognition of the authority of the bishops in matters of faith and morals.

This meeting, secretly prepared, was convened without the knowledge of and against the will of the bishops. Its aim was clear: To hinder still further the authority and influence of the bishops.

After all, the majority of delegates at this conference were paid delegates—appointed by action committees. They were delegates who often did not know what it was all about and who did not suspect that their signatures on the list of those present would be misused for the so-called Catholic Action.

Because of this, the bench of bishops at its conference of June 15, 1949, was forced to declare that the so-called Catholic Action is not Catholic but a separatist movement and that participation and cooperation with it must be prosecuted with ecclesiastical punishment. The inspirators have, ipso facto, been excommunicated. That is, they were expelled from the church according to Canon 2334, paragraph two, and Canon 2231, paragraph two, according to the Ecclesiastical Juridical Code.

For the whole action is aimed against the unity of the church and church discipline.

BY METHODS similar to that demonstrated above, many clergymen were misrepsented as voicing assent with the socalled Catholic Action. They knew nothing about its mission and their signatures were enticed under quite disguised slogans. They were asked if they favored a just agreement, if they were for the maintenance of church rights, for the teaching of religion in schools, the recognition of the Holy Father as visble head of the church. These priests did not want to undertake anything against the will of the church dignitaries. On the contrary, they wanted to support their efforts for the realizaton of such an agreement which would be in accord with the interests of the church, in the sense of church directives.

These priests consequently gave their signatures under conditions of deceit and pressure. They did not act either consciously or of their own free will and therefore maintained, of course, their loyalty to the holy church and faithfulness to the bishops, as many of them have already privately and publicly stated.

The names of many priests were published without their knowledge, even against their will and protests.

The Catholic bishops therefore call to everyone's attention that every attempt at the founding of diocese, regional, district or so-called action committees is forbidden by the church and that clergymen and laymen who personally participate in the founding of such actions or enter their committees or accept functions in them will thereby be excommunicated from the Catholic Church.

Also, the so-called Catholic newspaper, published by the Committee of Catholic Action, of course lacks the indorsement of the bishops and cannot be considered as Catholic. Therefore, the reading and keeping and distribution of this newspaper is forbidden by the church.

The clergy also must be aware that directives published by consistories under government control are not only ecclesiastically not binding but that also the clergy is bound by its conscience to observe only those directives and repeals which they are safely convinced were published by their respective dignitaries.

As the responsible representatives of the Catholic Church of the Czechoslovak Republic we, of course, feel heavy responsibility for the development of church affairs in our country and we are not deluding ourselves of the fact that the decisive moment of great tests has come for our dear faithful and for our loyal clergy.

If it were true, as has been claimed, that the main aim of all this which has now been organized against the Czechoslovak Catholic Church were to make the bishops come to a just agreement between church and state, then we declare that this whole campaign is superfluous.

CZECHOSLOVAK Catholic dignitaries had, and have, the greatest interest in reaching a sincere and just agreement between church and state and will not cease to pray for this end.

But they desire that a real agreement be reached on the basis of which the church could develop all its rich activity and put to use all its moral influence in favor of the state and its people. They want Catholics to be able to use their philosophy and to be able to direct their lives according to it, for religion should govern all acts of men.

But they do not want the church to become a mere servant of the state—in other words, the bearer of a different philosophy under a cloak of Christian religion.

They wish for an agreement, not a dictate.

In this spirit the Czechoslovak dignitaries at the bishops' conference of June 7, 1949, in Olomouc, laid down the basic conditions on which agreement would be possible and which should be accepted and guaranteed by the government beforehand. These conditions are:

1. The Christian world viewpoint (philosphy) will be recognized and respected in public life and education, in word and deed.

2. The government recognizes the spiritual authority of the Roman Pope as the supreme head of the church in matters religious and ecclesiastical, who according to valid authority does not touch the sovereignty of the state but is a natural consequence of recognized basic human rights, and especially the freedom of religion.

3. Before the beginning of negotiations, all measures restricting and threatening religious freedom of Catholics in the Czechoslovak Republic, especially the religious freedom and education of youth, be repealed.

In addition to this:

(a) The Gazette of Catholic Clergy, published by the Ministry of Education, Arts and Sciences, will be abolished immediately, and that the publishing of all official dignitaries gazettes will be permitted.

(b) The decree of the Ministry of Education, Arts and Sciences of May 23, 1949, about vacant church offices and accompanying stipends, as well as the decree of the Ministry of Interior of May 5, 1949, restricting the freedom of assembly and congregation, and also the decree for regional and district command of the state security police on the procedure against the Catholic Church, must be revoked.

(c) All restrictions involving the religious rights must be cancelled.

To these conditions a further demand is added—that the government will not support the newly formed Catholic Action and will not grant it state sponsorship. To demand the fulfillment of these conditions we feel commanded by our arch-pastoral responsibility before God and before you and before the conscience of the nation, because without their fulfillment the church would no more be the church of Christ and would not be able to fulfill its spiritual mission—that is, to teach, to sanctify and to direct.

WE ARE certain, dear brothers and sisters in Christ, that you approve of this, our standpoint and watchfulness. We would have had to feel ashamed before you had we acted otherwise, had we not acted like pastors who are willing in the interest of your Saviour to give even their lives for their sheep, but as hired pastors who forsake their flock treacherously in times of danger.

Help us and strengthen us with prayers, your truly Christian life and your unconditional loyalty to the good Mother Church so that with the help of the Holy Spirit, a negotiable path will be found for the regulation of church-state relations.

But if such an agreement could not be attained because it was decided to begin a struggle of extermination by all means against the church of Christ and misuse it in a cloaked way for ungodly purposes, then the hour of trial has come for the Catholics in Czechoslovakia.

The moment has come in which it is necessary to realize the words of the Apostle Peter: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you.

"But rejoice, inasmuch as we are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that, when His glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy."

Every test is of God's making and will surely contribute to the salvation of our souls. It is an opportunity to prove our faithfulness to Christ, to make amends for our trespasses and to learn to be true and consistent Catholics.

THE nation looks upon you, how you will fare in this historic moment of trial. The Catholics of the whole world are linked with you.

Remain loyal to your bishops, who suffer with you and do not

'Mental Bends' Called Hazard Of Retirement

Too abrupt retirement may produce "mental bends" as deadly as the better known reactions risked by deep-sea divers and tunnel workers, a noted psychiatrist warns.

Dr. C. Charles Burlingame, psychiatrist in chief of the Institute of Living, Hartford, Conn., passes on the warning editorially in the July issue of the Digest of Neurology and Psychiatry, released today.

He termed the mental signs and symptoms of work release as the "sudden job decompression syndrome," and warned doctors against prescribing "loafer's delight" as an antidote for excessive responsibility.

"How well we know the picture of caisson disease in the patient who has worked under excessive external air pressure," stated Dr. Burlingame. "How well we know that the pressure must be decreased gradually to normal.

"How well we know the tragic results to the tunnel worker who has the too sudden release of air pressure, with the danger of the 'bends' or even fatality.

"If we but looked at our experience during the past few decades, we could become equally familiar with the picture of the emotional caisson syndrome, caused by too sudden release from emotional pressure."

Preventive psychiatry, Dr. Burlingame stated, could cushion patients against "mental bends" by calling attention to the unseen dangers of too sudden retirement. As practical men of science, he said, psychiatrists should forsee that too sudden decreasing of a patient's resonsibilities may be fatal.

"Let us study and practice job decompression for our patients," he advised.

What's the Verdict?

ORDER OF SIGNING

Q. A man making a will called two friends into his office and said to them: "I want you to witness my will. I will sign it here and you sign it there." He pointed to the places for the signatures. Just then the 'phone rang and he said: "Go ahead and sign. I'll sign after I finish talking on the 'phone." The two friends signed as witnesses, and a minute later, while the friends were still in the office with him, he signed as testator. He left most of his money to outsiders, and his relatives contest the will, claiming it is invalid because the witnesses signed first. Is their contention effective?

A. The usual statute requires that "wills . . . shall be in writing and signed by the testator, or by some other person in his presence and by his express direction, and shall be attested . . . in the presence of the said testator by at least two credible witnesses." This does not say the testator has to sign previous to the witnesses . . . The latest case holds that a will signed by the witnesses previous to the testator is valid, so long as the signing by all of them is part of the same transaction. There are cases holding otherwise.—F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

'The Big Cat' at Met Packs Excitement

"The Big Cat" is on the loose at the Metropolitan this week. It's the rugged tale of a marauding savage cougar and the effect his presence has on three families in the Utah hills. If you like excitement of the knock-'em-down-drag-'em-out type then this new Eagle-Lion Production is for you.

"Cat" is the story of Danny Turner (Lon McCallister), who comes to the hill country in the depression year of 1933. He's looking for Tom Eggers (Preston Foster), who was once engaged to Danny's mother. Danny needs a job but Tom is broke; he's busy stalking a mountain cougar that's been raiding the local stock. Danny teams up with Tom.

Counterpointed against the theme of the chase is a family feud. Gil Hawks (Forrest Tucker) hates Tom Eggers, who reciprocates with interest. Tom was slated to marry Lucy Hawks, Gil's sister, but Gill stopped it. Lucy married someone else and became Danny's mother.

The reason for all this explanation is that the feud gives the director a chance to stage a smashing fist fight between Tucker and Foster; the chase gives him a chance to roam with the camera through the lovely Utahs, and present a rousing finish battle between a dog and the cougar.

There's romance, too, in the relationship between Danny and the daughter of a neighbor. The daughter is Peggy Ann Garner.

Obviously, much of "The Big Cat" is a trite movie but there are enough good qualities in it to appeal to the mass in movie audiences. The actors are all credible in a situation which has been around for years. The photography is in Technicolor which hasn't been splashed on indiscriminately; the musical score is interesting, often because of its absence. Phil Karlson, the director, has gotten much suspense in the tracking of the cat.

If you're looking for something for the kids to see, by all means take them to the Met. "The Big Cat" will be their dish.

FOR ALL THE COMFORTS OF HOME— GET AN EXTENSION TELEPHONE
An extension telephone in the bedroom is mighty handy when someone calls you late at night. And it keeps your telephone near at hand in case of an emergency.
An extension on the second floor saves a lot of trips up and down the stairs. It may prevent you from missing calls you wouldn't want to miss.
When you have an extension in the living room, you can read and relax without having to jump and run each time the telephone rings.
With an extension in the kitchen, you can watch those things on the stove while you're talking on the telephone. It's convenient for placing grocery orders by telephone too.
When you're entertaining guests, it's good to have an extension in the playroom. It adds that extra measure of comfort to the home.
You can have an extension telephone now in any room you wish. Once installed, the cost of this service is only a few cents per day. Why not call our Business Office and order your extension telephone today?

To those families who are waiting for telephone service: We're busy building and installing the complex central office equipment and other facilities needed to fill your orders. There is no shortage of telephone instruments.

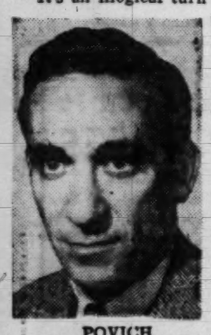
Cleveland Scores Twice in 10th to Beat Nats, 3 to 1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ONLY THE BRASHEST Yankee rooter could have foretold what has been happening in the American League this season and in his case the suspicion might have been that he was unhinged. Without Joe Di Maggio, the Yankees were supposed to be doomed to the second division, but there they are leading the league since the day the season opened.

It's an illogical turn of events. The Yankees are not visibly a first-place ball club, and what has been keeping them up there is a mystery. Maybe it is Manager Casey Stengel with his version of the Hindu rope trick. He has no DiMaggio, he's short on pitching, and the other day when they faced the Tigers there wasn't a .300 hitter in Stengel's lineup.



POVICH

Stengel, however, has been doing a bully juggling act with the talent he has. His most recent move was to call in Tommy Henrich from right field for the first base job. The Yankee outfield is rarely the same on consecutive days. Neither is its infield. Vic Raschi is their only solid pitcher. Yet the Yanks have been winning more games than any other club in the league. They're the only club that hasn't foundered at some point, and the first one to get squared away. And if DiMaggio recovers from his sore heel, the Yankees are certainly the club to beat.

BUT FOR THE first time this season, there is reason for real apprehension on the part of the Yankees. There are signs that a couple of other clubs, three in fact, are getting tough. They are the Red Sox, Athletics and Indians, and all of them could move on the Yankees and tighten up the race, if not take over the lead.

The Red Sox are still the best-hitting club in the league, the only team with power enough to win those badly-pitched ball games consistently. With their ability to rise above their own pitching, the Sox must be regarded as still a solid threat. In Mel Parnell they have a consistent winner, and Walter Masterson could be extremely helpful. Signs of better pitching for the Red Sox are busting out all over, in fact, with Rookie Maurice McDermott having won his last start handily.

The Yankees have reason to view with some alarm, also, the onrushing Cleveland Indians who have cut the Yanks' margin down by four games in the last three weeks and always did look like the most solid club in the league. The Indians are not too far out of it to make it rough on the Yankees, and take it all.

BOB FELLER'S come-back has been timely for the Indians. A Feller without a sore arm is a tremendous asset. And the Indians, strangely enough, have been acting like a better ball team ever since Lou Boudreau benched himself and installed Rookie Ray Boone at shortstop. Boone has taken up the slack in the Indians' infield both defensively and with his bat.

Not to be discounted either are the Athletics, currently in second place 4½ games out of the lead. The A's have never been far out of it, and they have in Dick Fowler a pitcher who has won six in a row and is the guarantee that there will be no long losing streak for Connie Mack's club. The A's have perhaps the best-balanced team in the league with their snazzy infield which features Eddie Joost, and dangerous hitters like Valo, Majeski, Chapman and Fain.

Until the other day, it was the Tigers who were the first club to make a concerted move on the Yankees. The Tigers got as far as three games behind the lead and were looking tough, but except for George Kell that Detroit infield is unsound. And they are short on pitchers. They are no club to alarm the Yanks.

IT COULD HAVE been an even tighter race except for a couple of accidents to the second-division clubs. The White Sox were commanding respect for six weeks, and then collapsed when their top hitter, Gus Zernial, broke his collar bone. The Nats were beginning to look like one of the tough clubs until June 9, when Eddie Yost suffered a seriously sprained leg at Cleveland.

The extent to which Washington has missed Yost is easily arrived at. Since he has been out of the lineup, they've won only five of their 15 games. Yost's worth to the Nats was never more apparent. He was hitting less than .250 when he was hurt, but he had the habit of getting the Nats' big hits. Without him, Washington is a stumbling outfit.

Yanks Split With Tigers; 3 Homers for Mullin in 2d

New York, June 26 (AP).—Outfielder Pat Mullin got off the bench to slam three home runs in the second game and lead the Detroit Tigers to a 12-4 victory over the New York Yankees and a split in a twin bill today. The Yanks won the opener, 6-2.

A crowd of more than 60,000 saw the Tigers knock out Yankee ace Vic Raschi and hang the second defeat of the season on the big righthander.

The Yankees broke a 2-2 tie with a four run spurt in the eighth inning of the opener to win.

Tommy Henrich drove in the first two runs in the eighth with a single and Yogi Berra sent in the next two markers. Ed Lopat pitched the distance for the Yanks for his sixth victory.

Mullin, who had not connected for a four-master until today, became the first American Leaguer to wallop three circuit blows in a game this year and drove in five runs as the Bengals ended Raschi's seven-game winning streak and tagged the Yankee ace with his second setback against 11 triumphs.

Raschi hurled the first two rounds, giving the Tigers six runs on seven of their 14 hits. Mullin, in the line-up only because of Johnny Groth's 17 for 0 batting slump which carried through the opener, hit his first homer with one on in the first.

Paul Campbell's two-run single and the first of Vic Wertz's three straight doubles chased over four more in the second. Mullin singled in this frame and wound up a perfect four-for-four performance with homers in the fourth and seventh off Frank Shea.

For Argument with Ump

Durocher Fined $150, Suspended Five Days

Chicago, June 26 (AP).—Manager Leo Durocher of the skidding New York Giants today was handed a $150 fine and a five-day suspension for his argument with Umpire Lee Ballanfant yesterday.

The Lip got the bad news by wire from Ford Frick, president of the National League.

The five-day suspension, which began today, apparently will include tomorrow night's Giants-Yankee game in the Yankee Stadium for the sandlot fund. Since Frick's telegram from New York did not specify suspension for five playing days, it is assumed tomorrow's off-day will be included.

In Durocher's absence, the Giants will be in charge of Coaches Freddy Fitzsimmons and Red Kress. The argument with Ballanfant came as a result of a decision at second base in the game with Chicago.

Gene Mauch of the Cubs grounded to Buddy Kerr, who threw to George Hausmann at second for a force play on Hal Jeffcoat, Cub outfielder. Ballanfant called Jeffcoat safe.

Durocher, during the course of the argument, according to Ballanfant's report to Frick, used profane language and bumped into the umpire.

Keltner's Hit Decides It, Griffs Held To 5 Safeties

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Steve Gromek, an Indian of long standing, became one in good standing yesterday, pitching the Tribe to a 10-inning, 3-1 victory over the Nats.

Making his first start in almost a month, the 29-year-old Cleveland veteran came up with his third triumph as the Indians came up with two runs in the tenth to upend Sid Hudson.

Gromek checkmated the Nats on five hits while Hudson, who absorbed his sixth licking, gave up 11, five of these being infield taps.

Kenny Keltner fired the shot that ruined the afternoon for 18,109 customers and enabled the Indians to walk off with their third success in the final game of the four-game series.

Keltner Delivers Punch

With Ray Boone on second by virtue of a walk and a Mickey Vernon sacrifice, Keltner lashed out a single down the third base line to score Boone with the run that proved enough.

For a fleet second, it appeared that Sherry Robertson would come up with the ball, but he artfully sidestepped the sizzling smash and Boone scampered in with ease.

Larry Doby, whom Hudson walked intentionally after Vernon's sacrifice, went to third on Keltner's hit and ambled in a few moments later as Bob Kennedy's smash off Al Kozar's glove trickled into right field for a double. Doby, who hit only one ball out of the infield in the entire series, knocked in the first Cleveland run in the fifth inning by legging out a hit to shortstop.

This tied the game at 1-1 as the Nats wrenched a run out of the knuckle-balling, curveballing Gromek way back in the first inning.

As usual, they had several momentous chances to unseat Gromek, but flubbed every one except in the first inning when Buddy Lewis' triple and Robertson's grounder to Vernon produced their lone tally.

The Indians had two hurlers warming up in the bull pen in the fourth inning when the Nats loaded the bases on Gromek with one away, but Kozar halted their activity by rapping into a double play.

In the very next inning the Nats had Gromek on the way out again as Al Evans doubled with one away and took third on a wild pitch. But, on third he remained as Hudson grounded out and Gil Coan flied out.

After that, Gromek was as hot as the 96-degree weather. He retired 11 Nats in a row before Ed Stewart delivered the fifth Nat hit, a single with one away in the ninth.

A Gromek single started the fifth-inning Cleveland rumpus that knotted the game. He was forced at second by Dale Mitchell, but Boone kept the attack alive by drawing a walk. Kennedy moved Mitchell to third with a fly to Lewis and Doby dribbled a slow roller to shortstop for the single that chased Mitchell home.

IN SHORT—Lewis' first inning triple hit the base of the rightfield fence. After misjudging it, Kennedy raced back and tried to make a leaping catch, but failed . . . Vernon turned an ordinary single into a double in the first inning, racing to second as Stewart fielded his hit slowly . . . Sammy Kaye, ardent baseball fan, personal friend of Lou Boudreau and musician of renown, saw the game from the press box . . . The heat was too much for Steve O'Neil, Indian third base coach, so Boudreau took over the direction of traffic at that station in the tenth inning . . . Today is a day of rest for the Nats, but they'll be on display again Tuesday night against the Athletics with Mickey Haefner pitching . . .

Waitkus' Lung Drained, May Leave Hospital in 2 Days

Chicago, June 26 (AP).—Eddie Waitkus, Philadelphia Phillies' first baseman who was shot by a girl fan June 15, may leave Illinois Masonic Hospital on Wednesday, officials said today.

A pint of blood was removed from the ball player's lung yesterday, but he was able to walk around in the hospital today and his condition was described as "good." The .22-caliber rifle bullet which penetrated his chest and lodged near his spine will not be removed before he leaves the hospital.

Dodgers Rout Pirates, 15-3; Second Called

Pittsburgh, June 26 (AP).—Aided by a 10-run outburst in the seventh, the hot-as-the-weather Brooklyn Dodgers trampled the floundering Pirates, 15 to 3, in the first game of a scheduled double-header today.

The second game, delayed 42 minutes by rain, was called at the end of the third because of Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew. The Dodgers were ahead, 5-4.

The largest crowd of the season—39,648—sweltered in humid 91-degree heat that was unrelieved by the intermittent showers.

The rampaging Dodgers pushed across 10 runs in the seventh inning of the opener. They battered four Pittsburgh hurlers for 22 hits.

Dino Restelli, Pittsburgh's rookie outfielder, hit his eighth home run in the first inning of the nightcap but it didn't count when the game was erased from the books.

Don Newcombe won his fifth victory for Brooklyn in the opener and had no difficulty taming the Pirates although he was touched for 13 hits. Batting honors went to Carl Furillo, the Dodger outfielder, who had five hits including his sixth home run. It was his third home run in as many days against the Pirates.

DiMag May Play 1st Game for Yanks In Exhibition

New York, June 26 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio may play in his first game for the New York Yankees tomorrow night, but it won't be in a regular American League contest.

He will participate in the home-run hitting contest preceding tomorrow night's exhibition game between the Yankees and New York Giants.

"If DiMag reports no ill effects," Yankee Secretary Arthur (Red) Patterson said today, "Manager Casey Stengel has instructed me to announce that he will open the game in centerfield."

A's Win, 4-2, Then Lose, 3-0

Philadelphia, June 26 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox split a doubleheader with the Philadelphia Athletics today, winning the second game 3-0 after the A's came from behind in the opener to clinch a 4-2 victory.

Wally Moses slammed a pinch-hit double in the eighth inning of the first game to drive in three runs.

Lou Brissie, in hot water in virtually every inning, recorded his eighth victory of the season in the opener. He has lost three.

In the nightcap, airtight relief pitchcing by Marino (Chick) Pieretti saved the day for the White Sox and starter Bob Kuzava.

Kuzava went to the showers in the eighth after successive singles by pinch-hitter Moses and shortstop Eddie Joost but Pieretti kept the string of zeros intact.

Kuzava in winning his fourth gave up five of the A's six hits. A's starter Joe Coleman limited the Sox to only four hits in the even innings he pitched but two were a homer and triple by George Metkovich.

Munger Bats, Hurls Cards To 2-0 Victory

St. Louis, June 26 (AP).—Red Munger pitched his first shutout of the season and slammed out his first home run of his major league career today to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 2 to 0 victory over the Boston Braves.

The tall redhead from Houston, who has had trouble going the route, was in rare form today. He stopped the Braves, who had been on a batting rampage in their two previous games here, with four hits. He permitted only one runner to reach third and fanned four.

Glenn Elliott, making his first start of the season for the Braves, also hurled creditably, but his mates were unable to back up his efforts with their bats.

The Redbirds took a one-run lead in the fourth on a walk to Stan Musial, Ed Kazak's sacrifice and Enos Slaughter's single to center. Munger made his pitching task a bit easier by pounding a homer into the left field seats in the fifth. Before the game, Musial was presented with the National League's most valuable player award for 1948.

It was the Birds' twentysixth triumph in 34 starts. They have won 10 of the last 11 series played, splitting one with Philadelphia.

Riggs Takes Pro Net Title

Forest Hills, N. Y., June 26 (U.P.).—Bobby Riggs of Altadena, Calif., won the national professional tennis championship today for the third time by defeating Don Budge of Oakland, Calif., 8—7, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5, on the wind-swept West Side Tennis Club courts.

The victory gave Riggs, who won the title in 1946 and 1947, his third leg on the big Benrus trophy. Jack Kramer of Los Angeles, the 1948 winner, did not defend his title.

Gusts of wind made accuracy almost impossible and both veterans made a surprising number of errors. Budge, who won the championship in 1940 and 1942, thrilled the crowd with his whistling forehand drives when he could reach his opponent's placements. But, in the end, the younger Riggs wore down the red-haired Budge, who is several years older.

In the first set, Budge led at 5—3 and reached set point in the ninth game on his own service but Riggs fought out of the hole and went on to win in 16 games.

Budge played his best tennis in the second set. He scored with his ground strokes and put away Riggs' lobs to win 6-3.

Newark Cites Past Records

Newark, N. J., June 26 (AP).—Parke Carroll, general manager of the Newark Bears, said tonight the local International League team is not interested in the dubious support of "fair weather friends."

He referred to last night's announcement of the Newark Star-Ledger that it is dropping the Bears from the International League standings on its sports pages "because they obviously do not belong in triple 'A' competition." They are 18½ games out of the lead.

Carroll said the Bears' recent slump is of less than one-month duration.

The Star-Ledger action was taken, he said, "despite the fact that in 17 years of affiliation with the Yankees, the Bears have:

"1. Been in the first division 16 times.

"2. Won seven league championships.

"3. Won four Governors' Cup playoffs.

"4. Won three Little World Series.

"5. Compiled a cumulative 129-game lead over the rest of the International League.

"The Bears wish to state they are not interested in the dubious support of fair weather friends or those who have such a peculiar notion of what constitutes justice and fair play," Carroll concluded.

The newspaper said it would restore the Yankee's farm team to the International League standings when "they show they are again a triple 'A' ball club."

Johnsen and Hippenstiel had beaten Fred McNair and Bill Gifford in a semifinal match earlier in the afternoon, 6—3, 6—2.

Godoy Meets Elkins Brothers, Sonny Boy Fights Underwood

Elkins Brothers, 23-year-old local heavyweight, returns to action tonight against Arturo Godoy of Chile in a scheduled 10-round feature at Griffith Stadium.

In another 10-rounder on the Liberty Athletic Club's show, Sonny Boy West, promisng local lightweight, will oppose Jesse "Topper" Underwood from Huntington, W. Va.

Elkins, informed that Godoy is an awkward and at times dull fighter, promises Washingtonians a good bout.

"I had to overcome a lot to make the showing I did against a bigger man with a punch in Pat Comiskey," he said. "I'll be meeting a man of my own height and nearer my own weight in Godoy, and I'll make him come out and fight. (Brothers, outweighed 31½ pounds, drew with Comiskey here last month.)

"Archie Moore has taught me a new punch, a short left hook to the jaw, I intend to use against Arturo tonight. It's floored several of my sparring mates and shaken up others during the past week, and if I connect with Godoy I'll hurt him."

AT CHARLES TOWN

Dear Folks:

This track has the reputation of being friendly. But for the first time, it is now possible to get the cold shoulder here. It's not the kind you're thinking of, however. It's the new air-conditioning unit in the clubhouse. The Press Club fellows tried it Saturday at their annual frolic and their approval was unanimous. Now the fans can play a hot horse and keep cool while they collect. Rain during the weekend served to help the running surface which was dry and mealy despite continual use of the watering truck. Visited Delaware Park last week where friend Alan Clark has been doing OK with his stable. Clark, however, has lost the services of Jockey Bobbie Ray Mitchell. The boy couldn't get enough outside riding and transferred his riding tack to Arlington Park. See you on the rail. BILL.

Leonard Chased by New York

Chicago, June 26 (AP).—The New York Giants salvaged the final contest of a three-game series today when they defeated the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 2. Dave Koslow went the route, for the Giants allowing seven hits for his third victory.

All of the Giants save Bobby Thomson cut in on an 11-hit attack on loser Dutch Leonard, Walt Dubiel and Bob Muncrief.

Johnny Mize singled across the first New York run in the third and then doubled and scored on Sid Gordon's single in the fifth. Three errors mixed with only one hit staked the Giants two more runs in the sixth and they concluded with another pair off Muncrief in the ninth.

Four straight singles in the seventh produced the only Cub markers. In the first six innings Koslo allowed only two hits. The Giants played without the fiery aid of Manager Leo Durocher, who began a five-day suspension today.

Reds Beat Phils Twice, 4-3 and 5-2

Cincinnati, June 26 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds swept a doubleheader today from the Philadelphia Phils, 4 to 3 in 10 innings and 5 to 2.

Homer Howell's pinch-hit double won the opener for the Reds and Herman Wehmeier, giving Cincinnati its first complete pitching performance in seven games, set the Phils down with eight hits in the nightcap.

The Phils, who had lost only three previous games on their swing through the West, almost pulled the first game out of the fire. Andy Seminick's thirteenth home run of the season knotted the score in the ninth but Curt Simmons yielded Cincinnati the winning run with one out in the tenth.

3 Records Set in AAU Track Meet

Fresno, Calif., June 26 (AP).—Three new records were posted in the books today and the 1949 Amateur Athletic Union track and field championships went into history behind a series of outstanding performances.

Adding their names as new record holders of the A.A.U. were big Jim Fuchs, the shotputter, and Fred Wilts, distance runner, both competing for the New York Athlectic Club, and Charles Moore, crack hurdler from Cornell University.

Los Angeles Athletic Club won the team championship with 87 19/20 points. San Francisco Olympic Club was second with 87¾.

Fuchs, a Yale man, tossed the 16-pound shot 57 feet 2⅛ inches, the best of his career. The old mark of 55 feet 5 inches, set in 1934 by Jack Torrance of Louisiana State University, went into obscurity.

Wilts, former University of Indiana distance runner, turned in two brilliant efforts during the two-night program. In the Friday night opener the New York FBI agent ran off with the 10,000-meter crown in the record time of 32:51.5. He came back Saturday night to show a fleet pair of heels to the field in winning the 5000-meter run with a time of 14:49.3.

Lower Lash's Mark

Wilts, 10,000-meter time, incidentally, displaced the 31:06.9 record made by another former Indiana student, Don Lash, in 1936.

Cornell's Moore produced the third new mark in the 400 meters hurdles. Competing unattached from Malverne, N. Y., Moore won the senior event in 51.1 to upset the record of 51.6 chalked up in 1936 by Glen Hardin of Louisiana State.

The 1949 AAU senior champions:

Falkenburg-Bromwich Match Feature at Wimbledon Today

By Carter L. Davison

Wimbledon, June 26 (AP).—Lean and lanky Bob Falkenburg plays a quarter-final match tomorrow against the man from whom he snatched the Wimbledon tennis crown in a thrilling finale a year ago.

John Bromwich, Australian veteran, has breezed through four matches to the quarter-finals of this year's Wimbledon without losing a set. He has, in fact, lost only 13 games in the 78 he had to play to get into the final eight.

Last year Falkenburg of Beverly Hills, Calif., won his Wimbledon men's single title by beating Bromwich in five gruelling sets. Bromwich had match point five times in the deciding set, only to see his title hopes splattered over Wimbledon green turf by Falkenburg's blistering serves, drives and smashes.

The Falkenburg-Bromwich match is the top feature of tomorrow's program, opening the last week of Wimbledon. In the other quarter-final matches of men's singles, Australian Geoff Brown, who ousted Pancho Gonzales yesterday, plays Yugoslav Jaroslav Drobny; Eric Sturgess of South Africa meets California's Frankie Parker, and the favored Ted Schroeder of La Crescenta, Calif. plays Frank Sedgman, young Australian champion.

Bronwich is given at least an even chance, by some galleryites to knock out the defending champion, fourth-seeded Falkenburg.

Perry Purse Heads Program Today as Charles Town Opens

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 26.—After a week's lay-off the Charles Town Jockey Club swings in action again tomorrow for the third and final of its spring-summer meetings here in the West Virginia panhandle.

The session lasts 18 racing days and will be concluded with the card of July 16. This will leave the track only 15 more days, starting on December 5.

As usual at this turf point, Racing Secretary Fred Burton found horsemen eager to send their charges into action when he opened his office for Monday entries. The eight-race program drew the limit of eight eligibles and six also eligibles for every event with the inevitable overflow.

Except for the Thornton T. Perry Purse, the afternoon's feature, the card is given over to horses of the claiming variety. However, distances range from 4½ furlongs to a mile and one eighth and the absence of standout favorites seems to point to considerable competition.

The Perry brings together sprinters of better than average ability and is a rather open affair, the eligibles being equally divided between winners and nonwinners here this season.

Favoritism is likely to settle on Sure Gift, impressive winner here owned by Wayne Kendrick of Washington, D. C., whose horses were signally effective at the previous meeting. Sure Gift is asked to carry 118 pounds, the same assignment due the Golden Dream Stable's Louie's Lin, also a winner here.

The two others with local victories to their credit are G. S. Gladney's War Champ, the lightweight of the party at 103 pounds than last to the apprentice allowance, and J. Farris' loving Robert, in comparatively light with 108 pounds.

Others assured positions in the starting gate are C. P. Chenoweth's Cinch, with several promising races to his credit. S. H. Hall's Tintrel, a fast closing but beaten favorite last week; B. B. Wright's Bachelor Belle, with little to recommend of late and F. J. Nally's Agria, a well-bred filly with speedy workouts.

The "also eligible" group includes several horses which would have to be given serious consideration if sent postward. J. K. Wynkoop's Dr. Johnson, rested since early in the previous meeting and Tea Time Farm's She's Scotch are rated best of the "doubtful six."

Handicap Decides It For Victors

Bobby Brownell of Chevy Chase had to have a lot of help from his Congressional Country Club partner, Harry Bachman, as the two teamed to win the Congressional Member-Guest Invitational, defeating Fred Neuland and Eddie Ault of Indian Springs, 2 and 1, yesterday.

With the match all even at the turn, Bachman utilized his five-stroke handicap to pull his team through to victory on the back nine of the second annual event.

Jim Garner of Washington Country Club and R. I. Preuit won the medal play trophy with a best ball total of 133, beating the combination of E. M. Warner and R. I. Barrett, Columbia, by matching cards, sudden death.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Bower and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Burrows tied for low gross award with 81s.

Richie Mitchell, 54, Almost Lightweight Champion, Dead

Milwaukee, June 25 (AP).—Richie Mitchell, 54, who boasted he once was "one second away" from the lightweight boxing crown, died at a local hospital today. He suffered a ruptured appendix last week.

His wife, Florence, who had been at his bedside since he was stricken, was placed in another hospital bed after his death. She was near collapse.

Richie, born Richard Harvey Mitchell on July 14, 1895, fought them all during his 11 years (1912-1923) in pro fight rings. But his greatest chance was the title bout with the late Benny Leonard in New York's old Madison Square Garden, January 14, 1921.

Mitchell was floored three times in the first round of that fight, but he kept on coming.

"After I had picked myself off the floor for the third time," he related recently, "I saw Leonard pull his right hand back. That was to be the clincher. But he never landed.

"I used my own right for a block as Leonard swung, and with my own left, a hook, caught him on the jaw. Down he went. At three, he was on one knee. He had a sick look on his face. At nine, he raised himself to a crouch and winked at his seconds, indicating he was all right. But he wasn't, I know.

"As he staggered back on his heels, he went all the way across the ring until he bumped into the ropes. And he got a lucky break when he did, because as he hit them his head snapped back. My right, which might have finished the champ then and there, just missed Benny's chin. My biggest chance to win the title was gone. I had been only one second from the championship."

Leonard went on to retain his title, the bout ending in the sixth round after he had scored three more knockdowns. The fight drew the largest gate in the old Garden's history, $166,000.

Mitchell's career ended in 1923 after he was beaten in Los Angeles by Phil Salvatore. Actually, it was all over two years earlier after he suffered a fractured arm in a bout with Ernie Rice at Milwaukee. After that he fought only seven times in the two years until he hung up the gloves.

Canadian Song Wins Tricolor To Top Potomac Hunt Show

By Harry DeMawby, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. George Plummer's Canadian Song led the Potomac Hunt Show hunter field to the tricolor yesterday at the club's kennels in Potomac, Md. Canadian Song scored 15½ points to finish ahead of Claude W. Owen's Sky Shadow, which finished with 12 points for reserve hunter honors.

Canadian Song was ridden by Bud Downes in all her classes except the ladies, when she was ridden to an excellent round by Mrs. Gardner Hallman to win the class. The mare had four wins and one second to her credit for an exceptional showing. Sky's Shadow alternately ridden by Gardner Hallman and Mrs. Benjamin Biays, jr., had two blues and a third to her credit.

Dr. John L. Keeler, popular Silver Spring veterinarian, rode his recently acquired Wood Secret to the jumper crown, scoring 16 points for the tricolor. Wood Secret was winner of the modified Olympia and the important jumpers stake, was second in the touch-and-out and third in the go-as-you-please for her excellent showing. Reserve resulted in a tie score between Fred J. Hughes, jr.'s veteran Black Caddy and Flint Hill Farm's Caddy Trump. Both horses scored seven points. On a toss to decide the reserve, Black Caddy was the applauded winner.

Truman Can't Get Old-Age Pension He Thought He Had

President Truman can't be paid the old-age pension he thought he was entitled to.

On the other hand, Vice President Barkley, though his job is exempt from the Civil Service retirement system by law, is now drawing a pension he has earned by his long years of congressional service.

This is the story.

The President was talking with Civil Service and Federal Security officals several weeks ago on the extension of the Social Security system. At one point someone suggested that both the President and the Vice President should be covered into the Social Security system along with thousands of temporary Federal workers.

Mr. Truman remarked that he was already covered by the Civil Service retirement system and he was satisfied with it. Civil Service officials hinted that it was news to them if he was. The President, however, said he was sure he was covered because of his previous Senate experience and the matter was dropped.

Sometime later, Harry B. Mitchell, commission president, looked up the retirement law and President Truman's record of public service. He discovered that Mr. Truman left the Senate to become Vice President before the law was enacted to give members of Congress the option of participating in the Civil Service retirement system.

But he did learn that the President could retire on a pension of considerably less than $100 a month under the reserve officers' retirement system. Mr. Truman had been active for years in the Army reserves. Also, that the law now exempts both the President and the Vice President from the Civil Service retirement system. Congress must amend the law if they are to be covered under it.

The Civil Service Commission has sent a memo to the President with the disappointing news.

Mr. Barkley's case is somewhat different. He was in the Senate after the bill was approved to provide retirement for members of Congress.

That moment on January 20—Inauguration Day—when Barkley resigned from the Senate and took the oath to be Vice President, he became eligible for a Civil Service pension. Here's why: He was over 70; he had served 30-odd years in Congress, and he was taking the job as Vice President which is not included in the Civil Service retirement system.

The Vice President didn't know until he read it in this column that he had become eligible for the annuity which he had earned.

Incidentally, he took the lowest possible pension. The Vice President could have paid up his retirement account for all of his years of public service and he would be drawing a substantially larger pension today. In fact, he was urged to do it by Civil Service officials. The Vice President turned down the handsome investment in these words:

"A fortune teller assured me the other evening that I would live to be 105 years old, but I'm not willing to put up any money on it."

FEDERAL employment continues to climb. During May there was a net increase of 11,300 workers, making a total of 1,932,900 in this country. The six agencies that reported increases of more than 1000 each were Army, Agriculture, Postoffice, Air Force, Commerce and Interior. Navy and Treasury made the big cuts. In this city there was an increase of 900 workers to a high of 216,100. This compares with 202,800 a year ago.

JOB NEWS: An exam for armament repairmen ($1.31 to $1.77 an hour) will be announced Tuesday by Civil Service. The jobs are open at nearby Fort Myer, Va. A test for correctional officer to fill vacancies in nearby Federal prisons and institutions is open. The jobs pay $3024 to men; $2799 to women. Get details at either Civil Service or the Bureau of Prisons . . . The next test for District firemen and policemen will be given on July 5. About 475 persons here have applied for the jobs since May 4.

Census Gets Under Way, D. C. a 'Sample Area' . . .

Unemployed Census Check Made in Area

By Judith R. Spivak
Post Reporter

Though the 1950 census is still in the future, a Census Bureau enumerator may knock on your door next month with a sheaf of questions in hand.

This is because Washington is one of 68 sample areas picked by the Census Bureau to collect its monthly statistics on Nation-wide employment trends.

25,000 Households Queried

Questioning about 25,000 households in the United States, the Census Bureau projects the figures to estimate national unemployment and labor force statistics.

Within 10 days, results of the June sample survey will be available in the "Monthly Report on the Labor Force," which last month estimated 58,694,000 on the job over the Nation, despite an increase in the number of jobless.

Though specific unemployment estimates may be subject to a sampling error of up to almost 10 per cent, the survey shows the pattern of change in the unemployment picture, according to Joseph Steinberg, chief of the Census sampling section.

An elaborate classification system is used by the bureau's statisticians to pick the 68 sample areas, representing varying segments of the national economy. Present sample areas were chosen in 1943 and will be reappraised in the light of 1950 census returns.

Households actually queried each month are picked scientifically at random within each sample area. About 190 households in the District, Arlington, Alexandria and the Bethesda and Wheaton election districts of Montgomery County are tapped each month by Washington's five enumerators. Each stays in the sample area six months, with 20 per cent of the households dropped and replaced every month.

Basic questions, carefully phrased in colloquial language, concern employment.

Extra ones are added occasionally for specific information on housing, income, education, migration and family.

Kind of Questions

Questions, incluing those on age, marital status, and relationship to the head of the household, are asked of every household resident 14 years or over.

Though names are asked by enumerators, none are forwarded to national headquarters, and all answers are required by law to be kept confidential.

Few people refuse to cooperate with interviewers who flash identification cards with their photographs, says S. H. Freedman, supervisor of the District field office.

Statistical allowance is made for refusals, which numbered three out of 197 households during the last survey here, Freedman said.

The District's enumerators include three college students and two housewives, plus one chief interviewer, who spot-checks their work and tackles unwilling customers. A two-hour training period precedes each monthly stint, with instructions on supplementary questions and review of interview techniques.

Enumerators are paid $1 an hour, make from $28 to $40 for their one week's work each month.

Woman Patient Found Hanged At Gallinger

The body of Mrs. Leola Stephens, 32, 1245 Carrollsburg pl. sw., was found hanging in a bathroom in the psychopathic ward at Gallinger Hospital yesterday morning while other patients were breakfasting.

Police said she was admitted to the hospital June 21, for treatment of colitis. Saturday, they added, she was transferred to the psychopathic section for observation.

About 9 a. m. yesterday, police said, she went to the bathroom. A few moments later, an attendant, Madeline Allen, found her hanging from a partition by her pajama coat. Attempts to revive her failed. Dr. Christopher Murphy, deputy District coroner, said he will investigate the case today.

County Starts Blitz Against Beetles Today

Montgomery County has mobilized its ground and air forces for the annual all-out blitz against Japanese beetles which begins officially today.

Six trucks armed with blowers will begin this morning spraying 4800 miles of county roads and suburban streets.

Two of the trucks will be deployed in the suburban areas, one will handle the public parks, and the remaining three will work over the rural upcounty regions.

An armada of 2200 wasps, divided into 22 colonies, have been placed in heavily infested areas to pounce on the beetles before they emerge as grubs.

On the home front, beetle traps are being leased to county residents and workers are spreading a beetle-killer called milky spore dust.

Outlawing Poll Tax Hit By AMVETS

A proposed constitutional amendment to outlaw the poll tax in Virginia was opposed in a resolution adopted by the State department of the American Veterans of World War II at its annual convention in Alexandria yesterday.

The amendment was attacked on the grounds that its literacy requirements might be used to bar Negroes from voting; that it gave the General Assembly too much power in setting up eligibility rules; that the taxes which would replace the poll tax were unfair.

At their concluding session in the George Mason Hotel, the 50 delegates indorsed the Federal housing bill, the Atlantic Pact and extension of 52-20 benefits to veterans.

William D. Latham, Richmond, was elected to succeed Carl F. Muse, Charlottesville, as State commander. Other officers chosen were Hyman Saperstein, Alexandria, northern vice commander; L. F. Kay, Portsmouth, southern vice commander; W. F. Carter, Portsmouth, finance officer; M. Phillip Katz, Alexandria, judge advocate; Dan O'Flaherty, Alexandria, national executive committeeman; and Howard B. Peace, Richmond, provost marshal.

7500 Masons, Friends Attend Outdoor Cathedral Services

More than 7500 persons, including Masons and their families, yesterday attended outdoor services at the Washington Cathedral, sponsored by the District's Grand Lodge of Masons.

All 48 District lodges participated in the first Grand Lodge field service held here in about 15 years. Grand Master Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., who welcomed the assembly, said he hoped it would become an annual tradition.

The Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, who delivered the sermon, urged Masons to practice the principles "we profess and now proclaim."

"Only as we do this, can we make any significant contribution to the cause of human freedom and enduring peace," he said. "Doing this, we can make our homes fountains of developing character and we can make our lodges the seed-beds of idealism and good-will."

The Very Rev. John W. Suter, dean of the cathedral, conducted the services, assisted by Dr. John C. Palmer, grand chaplain of the grand lodge.

The services were preceded by a procession of several thousand Masons, including Knights Templar, Tall Cedars of Lebanon, Master Masons, Shriners and members of the Grotto.

Sesqui Unit to Meet Tuesday With Truman to Discuss Funds

Members of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission Tuesday will discuss with President Truman plans for Washington's 150th anniversary celebration next year—with the emphasis on how it can be financed.

Commission officials were turned down by Congress earlier this month on a request for a three-million-dollar Federal appropriation to underwrite the "Freedom Fair."

The original amount, which was approved by President Truman, was cut to two million dollars by the Senate and then cut completely out of a deficiency appropriation bill by the House.

The commission then asked the District Commissioners for help in obtaining a loan of three million dollars for the enterprise. Under the proposal, the money would be loaned to the District out of the United States Treasury, to be repaid wholly or partly out of receipts from the 1950 event.

President Truman is the commission's ex officio chairman. Carter T. Barron is chairman. The White House meeting is set for 10:45 a. m.

Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.), Senate District Committee chairman and a member of the commission, has declared the Federal Government stands to make a profit of about a million dollars from the celebration through admission tax receipts.

District officials believe the event will also bring in an extra three million dollars or more in sales taxes.

Man Standing on B&O Tracks Waits for Train to Kill Him

A man who stepped in front of a fast passenger train near Beltsville yesterday, stood facing the oncoming locomotive with arms folded on his chest until he was struck and killed.

E. R. Gosnell, engineer of the Baltimore & Ohio Train No. 35, from Baltimore to Washington, told Prince Georges County police he blew his whistle for 700 feet, and applied his brakes, but could not stop in time.

Police said the man was thrown 150 feet, and badly mangled. Gosnell told police the man appeared to have walked deliberately from bushes alongside the right of way as the train approached, picked the track on which it ran, and waited.

Dr. John T. Maloney, a Prince Georges County medical examiner, said the man appeared to be about 35 to 45 years old; brown hair; 5 feet, 9 inches tall; about 175 pounds; wearing dark clothing; and 'of a good family.' There were no marks of identification nor was a wallet found.

Wife Shoots Policeman On His Dare

She Gives Details Of Wounding in Row Following Home Beer Party

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

A Metropolitan policeman who dared his red-haired wife to shoot him was in a serious condition at Suburban Hospital in Bethesda, Md., last night after the wife accepted the challenge.

The policeman, Pvt. James T. Phillips, 34, of the Eighth Precinct, was shot in the right shoulder at point blank range by his 31-year-old attractive wife, Shirley.

The incident, the wife said, occurred during a quarrel which followed a beer party at the Phillips' home, 614 St. Andrew's lane, North Hills of Sligo, Silver Spring, early yesterday.

Insanely Jealous, She Says

Mrs. Phillips told reporters that her husband was "insanely jealous" and that this had caused domestic discord for a number of years. The couple, parents of two children, have been married for 12 years.

She said that earlier in the night, during the party attended by about seven persons in the Phillips' recreation room, her husband became angered at her dancing with one of the guests.

At about 3:15 a. m., according to Mrs. Phillips, she was bidding the departing guests good night when her husband ran from the house.

She said she went back to the party room and lit a cigarette while dwelling on the task of straightening up the room.

Phillips came in shortly after, she said, and started to beat her head against the wall. She said that Phillips, a collector of guns and knives, then held a foot-long kris against her chest and threatened to stab her.

Then, she said, he procured his service pistol and pointed it at her.

"He went through the knife routine and then he got his gun," Mrs. Phillips asserted.

"He gave me the gun and said 'I dare you to shoot me.' It had happened before but the guns had never been loaded and I had always thrown them aside.

Tremendous Explosion

"But this time something passed over me. I was tired of these antics and I thought I would just take his dare. I pulled the trigger. It clicked. I pulled the trigger again and there was a tremendous explosion.

"I was dazed for a few minutes and then I was standing there with the gun in my hand. He was lying on the floor moaning. I wasn't sure whether I had shot him or whether he was just putting on an act."

After Mrs. Phillips had determined her husband was actually wounded, she said she called her uncle, Ralph Koontz, who lives with the family.

Koontz called the Silver Spring Rescue Squad and notified police. Phillips was rushed to the hospital.

Mrs. Phillips told substantially the same story of the shooting to police.

Detective Sergt. Carroll V. Miller of the Silver Spring police arrested Mrs. Phillips on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. She was released in $1000 bond for a hearing July 5 in Silver Spring Police Court.

Mrs. Phillips who exhibited a blackened eye asserted that her husband often fell into frenzied rages after drinking and had beaten her frequently.

Decision Due This Week on Negro High

The District Board of Education is expected to act this week on the proposed transfer of either Central or Roosevelt High School to use by Negro students.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning revealed yesterday he has nearly completed a study of overcrowding in the Negro schools and will report on the proposed shift, with a recommendation, to school board members this week.

Corning indicated his recommendation would be placed before a school board committee meeting and then laid before the membership at a session on Friday. He stressed that the school board has sole jurisdiction over any transfer plans, and added that members of the board would meet with the District Commissioners today to discuss the requested $225,000 appropriation for the Bell Vocational School.

The Bell School is in the process of moving from the old Central High School Building to Powell Junior High. Powell students have moved to Central.

Corning said Commissioner Guy Mason has raised the question whether the appropriation will be necessary if Central is transferred. He said Mason had speculated that such a move might mean the transfer of some Central students back to the Powell building obviating the need of funds, since the Bell movement would be canceled.

But Corning declared that under no circumstances would former Powell students be returned to the old school. Instead, he said, they would be dispersed throughout the school system. Transfer of Central or Roosevelt High to the Negro division has been urged by Washington Local No. 27, American Federation of Teachers, and a number of civic organizations.

Six Negroes Booed Out of Anacostia Pool

Members of Race Deprived of Using Facilities 4 Times

Six Negro youths from 14 to 21 years old were splashed and booed out of the Government-controlled Anacostia pool yesterday, after swimming there for less than five minutes.

It was the fourth consecutive day in which Negroes have tried to swim in the pool, which until last Thursday has been used exclusively by whites.

The contract between the Interior Department and Government Services, Inc., which operates Anacostia and five other District pools, provides that anyone can swim in any pool regardless of race.

Hundreds Watch Eviction

Between 700 and 800 white persons of all ages witnessed the proceedings, with approximately 50 taking an active part in evicting the Negroes from the pool.

Admission fees were refunded to the seven youths by order of R. J. McCarthy, director of park activities for GSI. McCarthy insisted the Negroes be admitted, over the strong verbal protests of bystanders.

The first two Negroes to swim in the pool yesterday afternoon were James Gasha, 417 7th st. se., and James Hamilton, 510 E st. se., both 14. Shortly after jumping in, they were surrounded by a small group of white boys who splashed water into their faces and drove them to the side of the pool. There, a horseshoe of perhaps 50 booed until the Negroes left. Extra police help was summoned, but not used.

One hour later, four Negroes appeared in the pool, Kenneth Robinson, 20, of 2635 Bowen rd. se.; Eugene Scott, 14, 2521 High st. se., and Richard Cook, 21, and Carl Contee, 14, both of 2639 Bowen rd. se. A fifth youth did not swim. These swimmers were also splashed by persons jumping and diving into their midst. They left a few minutes after they arrived.

Last Thursday a small group of Negro children first tried to swim at Anacostia. They left before they entered the pool. Friday, between 50 and 60 did swim in the pool. Saturday, a similar number started swimming. The lifeguards asked to be relieved, saying they feared they might not be able to handle disturbances.

Number off Sharply

Since the attempt to end segregation, the number of swimmers has fallen off sharply at Anacostia. Normally 1500 swimmers are handled daily, but the number has been "away off" since Thursday, McCarthy said yesterday.

Although the six GSI-managed pools are unsegregated by law, in practice Negroes regularly use Banneker and Francis pools, and until recently whites have used Takoma, East Potomac, McKinley and Anacostia.

Negroes have recently been swimming at McKinley, at 2d and T sts., ne., but the management there reported yesterday a "marked slump" in business.

All Negro youths at Anacostia yesterday said they had tried to swim in the pool because it was nearer their homes and they had read that the pool was supposed to be unsegregated.

Tenement Regulations Drafted by D.C. Officials

Second Major Step Undertaken by City To Raise Multiple Housing Standards

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District government is studying a set of regulations to control operation of tenement houses—the seat of some of Washington's most insanitary housing conditions.

Milton D. Korman and Hubert B. Pair, Assistant Corporation Counsel, are reviewing a draft prepared by William H. Cary, jr., director of the Health Department's Bureau of Public Health Engineering. The rules will then go to the Commissioners for final action.

Step to Raise Standards

The regulations represent a second major step in the direction of raising standards in District multiple housing, Cary said. The first was taken in 1942, when similar rules were enacted covering rooming, boarding and lodging houses.

The tenement rules will cover buildings rented to three or more families who share either kitchen or bathroom facilities, or both. Tenement regulations are considered even more important than those covering only sleeping rooms.

Tenement house operators now are required to obtain annual licenses from Superintendent of Licenses Chatham T. Nottingham. When the regulations are enacted, violation will result in license revocation, Cary explained.

Scope of Regulations

The five principal points in the tenement regulations are:

1. Elimination of overcrowding. The rooming house rules call for 50 square feet or 400 cubic feet per person. The tenement ratio calls for 80 square feet or 600 cubic feet, since persons do more than sleep in the space.

A question has been raised as to the right of Health Department inspectors to enter homes to check such things as overcrowding, but city legal authorities have held this right is clear as long as the inspection is made during reasonable hours.

"Overcrowding is one of the most serious problems in tenements," Cary said. The regulations will prohibit landlords from knowingly renting to families too large for the space available, and will make tenants, too, responsible for overcrowding.

Maintenance Provision

2. Maintenance of structural conditions. This would make the landlords responsible for repair of broken, rotted or warped floors, walls or ceilings.

3. Responsibility for removal of ashes and garbage. Provisions and care of general garbage receptacles for use by several tenants will be up to the landlord. Individual cans in units will be the responsibility of each tenant.

Carting away of ashes from the structures will be required of the landlord, but where individual coal stoves are used in apartments, tenants will be expected to collect ashes and deposit them in common receptacles.

Screening Obligatory

4. Screening. Screens are considered part of the building, and their maintenance is the responsibility of the landlord. At present, provisions of screens is voluntary in all types of multiple housing except rooming houses, but this is an attempt to raise standards, Cary explained.

5. General cleanliness of the premises. The individual tenant is responsible for the sanitary condition of his rented portion and the landlord for communal space, such as halls and yards.

The difficulty expected is in the shared space, such as kitchens and bathrooms, and here it will be up to the landlord to "keep an eye" on the cleanliness and bring insanitary residents into line, Cary explained.

Auto Crash Kills Riverdale Man Near Culpeper

Giles Thomas Berkley, 67, retired railroad employe, of 4803 Riverdale rd., Riverdale, Md., was killed and his wife injured in a traffic accident near Culpeper Saturday night.

The Berkley car collided with a truck operated by Willard R. Rupard, 34, of 1014 22d st. nw, about 2 miles south of Culpeper. Mrs. Brekley, 64, suffering contusions of the chest and other injuries, was taken to the Charlottesville Hospital, where Rupard also was treated.

The Berkleys were returning from a visit to a daughter in Tennessee.

20-Year Pain in Neck

A pain in the neck is a pain in the neck, even if it's 20 years old, F. Bernard Welsh, Rockville attorney and political figure, concluded yesterday.

Recently, he got the pain in the neck, acutely. X-rays revealed a naturally healed neck fracture that Welsh never knew he had suffered—until then.

Studying his past, he remembered an automobile crash 20 years ago when he served as chief of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department. That, he said, could be the only source of the break.

Now the pain is subsiding.

New Budget System Asked In Maryland

Baltimore, June 26 (AP).—A nonprofit organization supported by taxpayers wants Maryland to adopt a budget that would place a definite ceiling on expenditures.

"What the State of Maryland calls a budget is no budget in any sense," the latest report of the Commission on Governmental Efficiency and Economy declares.

The commission was set up as a watchdog over the Baltimore City and State governments, particularly to keep an eye on how they spend money.

The commission said it has recommended before that Maryland overhaul its budget, but nothing has ever been done about it. Such a budget would restrict the use of special funds by State departments, especially those received by the University of Maryland and the State Roads Commission.

In effect, the commission would have the State operate on its general fund budget—that departments which get special funds be required to operate under as strict a budget ceiling as those supported solely by receipts from general tax sources.

Departments receiving funds from outside sources—fees paid by university students, for instance—would not be able to spend more than was appropriated in the budget, even when special fund receipts exceeded estimates.

Excess receipts would be saved and applied to the next budget.

Taking an example the commission said that at the end of the third quarter of fiscal year 1949, 153 of the 175 appropriation items listed in the comptroller's report had been changed, while only 22 items remained unchanged.

The largest increases, it said, appear to have been approximately 3 million dollars for the university, $9,200,000 for highways, $1,500,000 for payments to local governments.

The report said the 1950 budget would "start" at $157,800,000, but added: "Experience indicates the so-called budget adopted by the Legislature in March, is not a measure of what the State's expenditures may be during the new budget year."

Alleged Bridge Leap Try Lands Man in Gallinger

Arthur G. Sunderland, 55, of 603 I st. nw., was in Gallinger Hospital yesterday following what police said was an apparent attempt to jump from Key Bridge.

Priceton D. Simms, 2117 Emerson st. N., Arlington, told them Sunderland hailed his cab Saturnight night at 12th and H sts. ne., inquiring the fare to the bridge. Arriving there, Simms said, Sunderland left the cab, paid him, then started to climb the rail.

With a passerby, Simms seized Sunderland and held him until police arrived.

Intent Audience at Meridian Hill . . .

900 Greet Theater's Rebirth On Capital's Meridian Hill

The theater revived last night in Washington and proved once more that the play's the thing, not the audience.

Members of the embassy set, society and just plain theater lovers, many of them in evening dress, bustled enthusiastically into the shrub-enclosed Meridian Park Theater to welcome Elizabeth Bergner and her troupe in Jean Girardoux's "Amphytryon 38."

Radio interviewers and reporters swarmed around the distinguished first nighters, eagerly sampling opinion about the birth of nonsegregated theater. The consensus was overwhelmingly, "We've got a theater now, who cares."

Among Notables "Out Front"

Among the host of distinguished patrons attending were Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Senator Irving Ives (R., N. Y.), Mrs. Mary Bethune, Dr. and Mrs. Mordecai Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hildreth, and Ambassadors from Italy, Canada, Norway, Mexico, Peru, Chile and Austria.

Technically there were shortcomings. Late arrivals caused a 30-minute delay in starting. Some of the seats in the middle rows were not high enough and several persons stood it out around the sides. The management plans to raise the stage 18 inches today.

Fireworks Disconcerting

Acoustics, abetted by amplifiers, were generally good, but a few dead spots turned up. Some boys caused occasional disruptions by setting off an intermittent barrage of firecrackers in the area.

Park police reported that a gang of about 60 Negro youths threw stones at the rear stone wall of the theatre and were dispensed. The audience was not disturbed by the incident.

Although she was slightly unnerved by the booming firecrackers, Miss Bergner was full of her familiar charm as the adorning spouse of Amphitryon and the object of Jupiter's far from platonic affections.

The play was written in French by Girardoux especially for Miss Bergner who was presenting it in English for the first time. She was supported by an all-professional cast in the Washington Theater Festival, Inc., production.

Neighborhood folk strolling through the park, inquired at the box office about getting in and some showed some disappointment at the $1.80-to-$4.80 price scale. All but a few of the 930 seats were sold out, however.

After tonight, tickets will be scaled from $1.20 to $3.60. The play will run for two weeks.

What unfavorable reaction was heard about the prospect of mixed theater audiences was pretty well summed up by a North Carolina girl, now a District school teacher, who admitted that she didn't like the idea of sitting next to Negroes.

"But I want to see a play," she said as she headed for the box office.

Georgetown Medical Gets Cancer Grant

Cancer grant renewals totaling $72,140 to finance training programs in medical schools here and nearby were made public today by United States Public Health Service.

The grants and the schools to which they have been allocated are: Georgetown University Medical School, $25,000; University of Maryland School of Medicine, Baltimore, $25,000, and Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, Baltimore, $22,140.

Similar grants totaling $81,439 to aid cancer teaching programs in the Nation's dental schools were announced. These include one renewal grant of $5000 to Georgetown University Dental School, and $5000 to the University of Maryland School of Dentistry, Baltimore.

Special Funds Allocated

Funds to finance a special study in lung cancer and other sums to investigate promising cancer detection tests have been allocated by United States Public Health Service.

The awards are part of $550,802 distributed through the National Cancer Institute to finance 36 special cancer control projects approved by the Institute and by Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele.

The lung cancer study, to be carried on by the California State Department of Health, will consist of detailed investigation of employment history of some 500 lung cancer patients. Its purpose, it was said, is to determine if possible whether any common environmental factors may be identified as possible causative agents.

Among the cancer detection tests to receive money for further study is the already well known Huggins blood test. The test, developed by Dr. Charles B. Huggins, surgery professor at the University of Chicago, screens out cancer victims through a simple, inexpensive clotting test of their blood samples.

R. L. Wilbur Dies; Hoover Cabinet Aide

Palo Alto, Calif., June 26 (AP).—Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, former Secretary of the Interior, educator, physician and renowned humanitarian, died today.

Death, caused by heart disease, came to the 74-year-old internationally known Californian in his home on the campus of Stanford University—the institution he headed for 27 years.

Dr. Wilbur was stricken with a heart ailment five years ago. He was gravely ill for months but recuperated and had been fairly active until two weeks ago.

In New York, Herbert Hoover, in whose Cabinet Dr. Wilbur served as Secretary of the Interior from 1929 to 1933, expressed deep regret over his death.

"He was my devoted and constant friend from our boyhood," the former President said.

Mr. Hoover lauded Dr. Wilbur for "a multitude of special services to the people."

It was Dr. Wilbur who, as Interior Secretary, signed the contracts for Hooyer Dam at Boulder, Nev.

Dr. Wilbur was president of Stanford University from 1916 to 1943. Upon his retirement, he became chancellor of the university, a post he held until his death.

Born in Boonesboro, Iowa, April 13, 1875, Dr. Wilbur was graduated from Stanford in 1896 and from Cooper Medical College in San Francisco in 1899. He became dean of Stanford Medical School in 1911. He left the campus for extended periods of time only twice thereafter.

The first time was during World War I when he went to Washington as chief of the Conservation Division of the United States Food Administration. The second time was when he became Secretary of the Intrior.

Dr. Wilbur was founder of the California Physicians' Service, a voluntary, prepaid health insurance plan and forerunner of health care plans on the insurance principle. He was opposed to socialized medicine.

Party for Biffles Is Prelude to July 4 Fete

By Marie McNair

THE friendship of Leslie Biffle, Secretary of the Senate, and Joseph B. Ryan, of New York, has held firm over a period of 20 years or more. They met back in the days when Mr. Ryan and the late Senators Pat Harrison and Joe Robinson, were golf partners.

So—it was quite natural that Mr. Ryan would give Mr. Biffle a send off party, a pleasant prelude to "Les Biffle Day" on July 4 in Piggott, Ark., birthplace of the man who runs the Senate, and one of President Truman's closest friends.

Mr. Ryan, has just resigned as a vice president of Chase National Bank, now heads the Knies & Co. in New York.

He took over the Carlton Room—air cooled—at the Carlton Hotel, provided a magnificent buffet, a stringed orchestra and a couple of bars, and then invited almost 200 friends to pay tribute to not only Les Biffle, but his wife, Glade.

There was a nice air of informality about the party, with arriving guests more likely than not finding the host and guests of honor in the center of a group of old friends.

Mrs. Biffle, in a golden brown crepe frock with rippling back drape, had pinned a pair of purple orchids to her shoulder and topped her costume with a beige straw hat trimmed with the palest of pink roses veiled in soft brown.

Bradleys Early

It being a Sunday afternoon, with the tired businessman out for golf, tennis, or a swim, it was early evening before the room had filled.

Gen. Omar Bradley, Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Bradley, were however, among the early arrivals, were on their way again before more than a dozen guests had arrived.

The Tom Blakes—Maria Blake hatless and wearing a cool gray frock—came early, so did Lawrence W. Robert and Evie, with Coco, smartly shorn of her coat for the summer, left tethered to a chair in the lobby.

The French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, came alone as Mme. Bonnet is suffering from a bad tooth. Gen. Wade Haislip cool in white linens and Mrs. Haislip in sheer summer black, told me they'll be off Wednesday for a European jaunt, to be gone six weeks in Germany, Holland and Belgium.

Practically everyone was about to take off or had just returned, or so it seemed. Capt. William H. Watson and Mrs. Watson, who had been for a short holiday, found themselves back in town until the middle of the week when the captain reports for sea duty and Kathleen leaves for her home in California's Monterey.

Constantine and Garnett de Stackelberg were full of health and sunburn from a weekend with the Leon Hendersons at their place on the South River.

Here from Newark were Mr. Ryan's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Schubert. Walter Schubert ,and from New York came Paul Porzelt.

Buffet Plentiful

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Martin of Toledo, Ohio, were there and also from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond M. White of Ridgewood, N. J. Former Senator and Mrs Burton Wheeler sat a small table for a supper which might have included any of these dishes on the buffet: cold turkey, cold ham, crab ravigotte, cold tongue, fried shrimps, sea food Newburg, salmon, green salad, vegetable salad, potato salad, chicken a la king, and ice cream bombe.

Others there were the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Louis Denfeld, and Mrs. Denfeld in white eyelet frock and hat to match; Morris Cafritz and Mrs. Cafritz in off-shouldr frock of burgandy red veiled in black lace, a wide brimmed natural straw hat with black velvet crown and a single rose for trimming.

Colonel Guggenheim and his Missus—looking like a blue angel in bouffant frock and tiny ostrich cape, were on their way to dinner; Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan were homeward bound to dress for an 8 o'clock dinner, and then there were Representative and Mrs. Ken Regan, Judge and Mrs. George Neilson, Mrs. Dale Miller in black with a black cartwheel hat edged in white ruching.

I saw Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the Attorney General, and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Shears, who came together from 2101 Connecticut ave., where they live. And Mrs. Mitchell Palmer buzzing around in a black frock with colorful wide brimmed hat; Dr. Tomas Cajigas, Tilghman Bunch, the Douglas MacArthurs, she in a coca brown frock, and her hair cut close to her head; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Russell and Edward H. Foley, Undersecretary of the Treasury, but not Mrs. Foley.

Sculptor Present

Felix de Weldon, the noted sculptor, who has completed a bust of Les Biffle, which will be unveiled on Les Biffle Day in Piggott, was there, with Mrs. de Weldon. And—to go on, there were Gen Hoyt Vandenberg, and Mrs. Vandenberg wearing a full skirted navy blue taffeta and wide white hat; Senator Brien McMahon accompanied by Mrs. McMahon; Mr. and Mrs. William W. Roche, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bauer, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Chesney, Mr. and Mrs. William L. P. Burke and Mr. and Mrs. James O'Connor Roberts.

naturally different
Similar, yes, but not the same. That's why the furs of these two animals are sold by different names—nutria and beaver.
Yet two textile fibers that differ from each other far more than beaver differs from nutria are sold to you as one and the same thing—"rayon." They differ in almost every quality of importance . . . in resistance to soiling, in ease of washing, in the way they iron, in their ability to stay in press, in draping qualities, in resistance to shrinkage, etc.
To avoid blind buying, urge your retailer to call these fibers by different names—to identify one as rayon, the other as estron—as recommended by the American Society for Testing Materials.
To receive a free picture book that shows you in photographs of actual tests the differences between these two man-made fibers, just pencil your name and address on this ad, and return it to us.

Where to Have Patterns Cut

Is there any place that you know of in Washington where, for a reasonable price, I can have a master pattern cut so I can alter other patterns to fit my difficult figure? A. L. D.

Yes, there is a school of design in the 900 block of F st. which will cut a basic pattern for you to fit your own figure. In addition to cutting the pattern, they will fit it in muslin for you to be sure it is exact. The $10 fee includes also the pattern, made of flexible cardboard which will last much longer than a tissue-paper pattern or the muslin pattern. For further information, I suggest that you call the school at STerling 4383.

We are planning to have the living room in our new home painted cream color because we believe it will blend with any color furniture we choose. Since we love gay colors, could you suggest what color our drapes and slip covers should be so that we won't overdo it? Or, do you think we should stick to soft "quiet" colors? Also, I am going to buy several table lamps. Should they be all the same shade or can they be different? Our living room will be 16 by 11 feet. What color should our rug be? W. J. L.

You could use either gay or soft colors with a cream background. Since you love gay colors, by all means use them. With cream walls, you could use almost any color (1) a deep blue and canary yellow; (2) chartreuse, brown and eggshell; or (3) burgundy, Wedgewood blue and yellow.

Since your room is not huge, I suggest you do not use too many different patterns in it. If you wish figured slip covers, have the large piece and possibly one chair made in pattern and a plain color for the third chair. Or, you could have two figured chairs with the sofa a plain color. I suggest you have the rug a plain or tone-on-tone medium shade. The drapes could also be either plain, a one-color brocade type of fabric or a fabric with a very tiny design. But, if you like an uncluttered feeling, I'd suggest plain curtains.

In the first color scheme, use a medium blue rug with deep blue and yellow in the figured slip covers. With this color scheme, the drapes could be either a deep yellow or a shade of blue darker than the rug. Small accents in the room should be yellow.

With the second scheme, the rug could be a medium brown (dark colors in rugs are impractical because they show dust and lint). The slip cover fabrics could be brown and chartreuse, with eggshell accent; the drapes a beige, possibly with chartreuse fringe or trim.

The third color scheme calls for a dusty rose rug, Wedgewood and blue slip covers, and burgundy or deep rose drapes.

For a room this size, lamp shades the same color would be very effective. Keep the shades light in color. And by choosing a warm color for lamp shades you will give a cheerful glow to the room.

I have a light blue rayon shantung dress which I made and got cherry stains on. When I tried removing the stains I also removed the coloring of the dress. Now, I would like to dye it a light blue. How can I go about it? G. S.

Since you want the dress a light blue, I'd suggest tinting instead of dyeing since the latter requires boiling. Buy one of the well-known brands of tinting dyes for use on rayon. If soiled, wash the dress and thoroughly rinse. If not soiled, wet it. Now, dissolve dye in small pan and strain through a cloth into the vessel in which you plan to dye it. (The bath tub would be fine because it is large enough to hold the dress without crowding). Run three or four inches of hot water into the tub, add dissolved dye and mix thoroughly. Place wet dress in tinting bath and stir constantly until material is a shade darker than desired. If color isn't dark enough add more dye. (All colors appear darker when wet). When it is desired color, remove from water and rinse until water remains clear. Place in a clean towel, roll and squeeze until all excess moisture has been removed. Some rayons are better if pressed while quite damp. Press shantung first on wrong side, giving special attention to seams, padded places, etc., to stretch them to original size if necessary. When pressed dry on wrong side, press on right side.

How does one prevent sagging on the bias seams in so many of the new cotton dresses when they are washed or even dry cleaned? If they are taped, will the skirt sag on either side of the seam and look worse than if the whole front and back dipped? M. J. C.

If the cotton fabric is a good quality firmly woven one it should not sag on either side of the seams after it has hung for a week or so. Because bias will sag somewhat, it is wise to allow the dress to hang on a hanger for a period before putting in or adjusting the hem. At the end of the hanging period stitch tapes to the seams and straighten the hem. In this way your hem line should remain straight.

How can I keep the neck of a light suit clean without doing the whole garment? My skin is oily, I perspire and am really not getting the use I should out of a beige rayon suit (a real suit, not a dress) because I don't want to stain the collar. I don't like a blouse collar outside. M. J. C.

You could apply an over-collar in a color exactly matching the suit. This could be made of cotton or rayon and to fit the suit collar exactly. If it was in the same color it would not change the appearance of the suit. The top collar should be basted on by hand so it could be frequently removed and washed.

Another idea would be to sew a bias fold of matching material to the inside neckline seam, having it wide enough so that it just comes to the top of the collar fold on the side next to the neck. This could be arranged so it wouldn't show if placed only around the back of the neck.

Wise words, Petunia! An old-fashioned steel buttonhook is a fine cherry-pitting tool . . . and so is a new sterilized wire hairpin.

THESE INTERESTING salad servers and pepper and salt shakers are the work of Bob Stocksdale, of California, one of America's outstanding wood artisans, who will give a special exhibit of his work here this week. The shakers at the upper left are curly maple, the salad servers mahogany, and the lower shakers Mexican rosewood. Mr. Stocksdale will be here today, Tuesday and Wednesday and the exhibit will be held from 9:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. at Ursell Handcrafts, 3243 Q st. nw. His fine trays, bowls, and other articles have been exhibited at the New York Museum of Modern Art, San Francisco Museum of Art, and other well-known gallaries. Such beautiful woods as jenisero and prima vera from Guatamala, koa from Hawaii, black walnut and wild cherry from India, curly maple from Oregon and magnolia from Georgia help make his carvings of everyday articles real works of art

THE FAMILY SCRAPBOOK

BY DR. ERNEST G. OSBORNE

Puppets Are Fun

Over the years children, and grown-ups, too, have enjoyed puppets. Indeed, one of the most popular shows on television today is a puppet-centered one.

Even young children can enjoy the simplest sort of puppets, those which fit on the hand. Such puppets can be purchased in stores or, even better, may be made from mittens, heavy socks, or a heavy piece of cloth. Arms, into which the thumb and little finger slip, are sewed on the side of the body. Faces can be painted or sewed on, using yarn or bits of colored cloth. Papier-mache faces also can be made and fastened to the cloth "mitt."

More elaborate puppets can be made by following directions in books and pamphlets which your public library should have.

If a whole family of puppets is made—father, mother, and the children—your youngsters can put on little family plays making up the conversation and action as they go along. It's most interesting and instructive to listen to their ideas about family life. You may get some real insight into what they feel about their relationships with you and with other members of the family.

Teenagers!

Do You Know How to Stand On Your Feet?

By Ida Jean Kain

KICK off your shoes, teen-agers, and relax, while we put a firm foundation under your future. . .

Whether you have your heart set on a career as a teacher, model, movie star, nurse, dietitian, photographer, reporter, foreign correspondent, or sweet little housewife, you'll have to stand on your own two feet. So don't cramp your style now.

Get over the notion that small feet are cute. Girls are bigger now, and so are feet. Don't try squeezing into a Cinderella shoe. For a half size less you should ruin your feet and your future!

Mark this — feet continue to grow at least until the age of 20, so have yours measured every time you buy a new pair of shoes. Sometimes one foot is slightly larger than the other, so fit the larger foot. In trying on shoes, stand up, walk around. Be sure there is plenty of toe room, and that the shoe feels comfortable even when new. Breaking in tight shoes is apt to mean breaking down your feet! Too-short shoes can even make hammer toes.

If you know exactly what you want in the shoe line . . . you're a rare woman indeed and the salesman will love you. But don't insist on buying a particular style even when they don't have it in quite your size. Have you ever said: "This won't be too tight after I've worn it awhile?" Be smart, girls—fit your feet as well as your fancy.

No matter how "sharp" the shoes look, you won't appear glamorous if your feet hurt. It shows in your walk, your posture and even in your face. Ill-fitting shoes and run-over heels can result in an uncertain, awkward gait and spoil your posture. Too-high heels can throw you completely off the beam. If its added inches you're after, standing and walking tall will do far more for your figure than teetering on spike heels. Not that you can't wear high heels on dress-up occasions, but steer clear of the kind that pitch you forward.

The moccasins, so dear to teen-agers' hearts, are fine, provided they fit properly and give support. But shuffling along in sloppy slippers crushed at the back, is ruinous.

Iced Mocha Is Summer Drink

Want your summer refreshments to look lavish and be simple? Iced Mocha with Chocolate Float is the answer.

Mocha, with its subtle blend of chocolate and coffee flavors, is a taste-tempting drink in itself. Topped with a generous spoonful of velvety-smooth Chocolate Marlow, it becomes a captivating refreshment treat. Chocolate Marlow is one of the many simple frozen desserts which can be whipped up so easily and economically with evaporated milk. You will find it a favorite dessert for family meals.

Chocolate Marlow

1½ squares bitter chocolate
1 cup evaporated milk
16 marshmallows (¼ lb.)
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup evaporated milk, chilled icy cold.

Shave chocolate into top of double boiler. Add the 1 cup evaporated milk and marshmallows. Cook over boiling water until marshmallows and chocolates are melted. Stir to blend well. Cool. When mixture is cold, add vanilla. Whip chilled milk very stiff. Fold in chocolate mixture very lightly but thoroughly. Pour at once into cold freezing trays and freeze. Yield: 1 quart.

ICED MOCHA

3 tablespoons cocoa
3 tablespoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup hot water
1 cup cold water
1 tall can evaporated milk (1 2/3 cups
1½ cups cold strong coffee

Blend cocoa, sugar and salt. Add hot water and stir until smooth. Cook slowly over a low heat 2 or 3 minutes, or until liquid is thick and creamy. When cocoa mixture is cold, add the one cup cold water, milk and coffee, and chill before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Put Ties In Before Hand For Neater Collars

Your husband's shirt collars will last longer if he'll remember to slip his necktie into place before donning his shirt. This, according to the American Institute of Laundering, research and educational center for the laundry industry, is better than forcing the collar up and back down again after it has been buttoned.

The Lyons Den By Leonard Lyons

CAPT. HARRY BUTCHER, who was Eisenhower's Naval aide, visited the General at Columbia University this week. He brought a gift from Europe—a statuette of Winston Churchill smoking a long cigar . . . Eisenhower revealed that since his recent illness he stopped smoking, and has gained 16 pounds. Captain Butcher then drew a cigar from his pocket, and asked if the General would mind if he smoked. "Not at all. Go right ahead," said Eisenhower. "I have the complex of superiority relished by all non-smokers when others start smoking in their presence."

CAPTAIN BUTCHER owns and operates a radio station in Santa Barbara and is a member of the Country Club in the Republican community. Last November, when Truman was elected, the officers of the club said that the only ones at the club delighted with Truman's victory were Captain Butcher and the caddies . . . Butcher wrote this to Charles Ross, the White House press aide. Ross replied, in behalf of the President: "Give the caddies our greetings." Butcher told the caddy-master to show this letter to the caddies. "How'd they like it?" he asked the caddy-master, who said: "They were uneasy about it" . . . "But why?" asked Butcher. The caddy-master explained: "They think they're being drafted."

Bill Gold is on his vacation and will resume "The District Line" July 18.

Grin and Bear It — by Lichty

"We're doing our best to get publicity, Denise . . . it's just hard to get your name in the papers these days unless you're a spy."

ARTHUR J. KENNEDY, the young actor whose star has risen as a result of his performance in "Champion," "The Window" and "Death of a Salesman," took dancing lessons from Paul Draper for two weeks. Kennedy had to learn to dance for a role in summer stock. Draper tried to teach him, then resignedly suggested: "Maybe it would help if I saw the set on which you're to dance" . . . Kennedy brought him a copy of the set, a scene in Central Park. "What's this?" asked Draper, pointing to a plant, and Kennedy said: "That's a wisteria bush" . . . "Good," said Draper. "My advice is—when you dance, dance behind this bush."

EDGAR BERGEN is working on a new dummy, to be introduced in his television show this fall . . . The American witnesses at the treason trial of Tokyo Rose in San Francisco will receive a $5-a-day allowance from the Government to cover expenses. The Japanese witnesses will get $10 a day. Clark Lee, the correspondent who caught Tokyo Rose, will be one of the witnesses against her . . . Heywood Hale Broun, whose father founded the Newspaper Guild has received an honorary withdrawal from the guild and now carries an Actors Equity card as a member of the resident company of the Woodstock Playhouse . . . The contract Dick Aldrich received from G. B. Shaw for his Lili Palmer-Cedric Hardwicke production of "Caesar and Cleopatra," was written by Shaw in longhand.

FREDERIC MARCH, whose name came up in the Judith Coplon trial, gave an ambulance to Finland during the Finnish-Russian war, and an ambulance to France in 1940, when Russia was calling the war an imperialistic one. In discussing the Guilt-By-Association Theory, March is showing his friends this paragraph he has written, addressed to four GI's:

"Isn't it true that in March, 1945, at the River Elbe, you shook hands and fraternized with two Russians, whom you knew to be in the pay of the Kremlin—that you sought this meeting for several months and risked your life to accomplish it, although you had every reason to believe that these men were Communists, or at least fellow-travelers? Answer yes or no.

THE PUBLICATION of the story about Arthur Schwartz' old song, 'Baltimore, Md., Is the Only Doctor For Me," has opened a new market for it. An order was received from Johns Hopkins in Baltimore . . . Robert E. Sherwood reported to his colleagues, Miss Hart and Irving Berlin, and told them he had had a trying day: A visit to the dentist, and then to Harvard to receive an honorary degree . . . Dorothy Stickney, now vacationing from "Life With Mother," has sold two poems to Good Housekeeping magazine. They will appear in the August issue... Chico Marx challenged an actor to fight, but changed his mind when the husky actor said: "Okay, Chico,—but remember, there are only three of you Marxes left."

MIRIAM HOWELL, of the Paul Small agency, phoned a producer and negotiated with him about a client she was representing. She mentioned the terms her client demanded, and the producer refused them. Miss Howell then told him of her client's alternate plan—to go into a rival production which was sure to hurt the producer . . . "The deal's off," the producer told her. "I will not let an actor hold a gun to the point of my head."

DORE SCHARY, the executive producer at MGM, has a rubber mat at the entrance of his Brentwood estate. On this mat are stamped the words "Schary Manor." This is the mat from the Newark, N. J., hall operated by his mother for weddings, parties, etc., the "Schary Manor" where he first learned about show business . . . In her forthcoming article in the Ladies' Home Journal, Grace Tully, who was Roosevelt's secretary, reveals the story of the way the Harry S. Truman and William O. Douglas names were switched, in Roosevelt's letter to the Democratic convention . . . Ted Lewis tells of a child star who asked his mother if she loves him. His mother gave him the assurance, and the child said: "Then why don't you get a divorce and marry a producer who'll give me a good role?"

ROBERT LEWIS TAYLOR'S delightful series on W. C. Fields, now running in the Saturday Evening Post, didn't have room for this story about the late comic: One of Field's old vaudeville friends could get few bookings, until the day the Titanic sank. Then he was booked everywhere in England, because he included in his routine the words: "Who stood at attention, 'mid Destiny's fall? The sailors of Britain, the bravest of all. Who stood amid icebergs," etc., etc. A few years later, when Fields met him, the vaudevillian said he was unemployed. "After all," Fields consoled him, "you can't have a Titanic disaster every season."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Anderson Is Called on Carpet

By Drew Pearson

It isn't often that two men who have held the same Cabinet job are summoned before the President to settle the question of whether one is supporting the other. However, that is what happened to former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson and his successor, Secretary Charles Brannan. They faced each other last week in front of Mr. Truman.

Pearson

Anderson, once a pillar in the Truman Cabinet, now an A-1 Senator from New Mexico, slipped in the side door of the White House unnoticed to newsmen. Truman promptly challenged him regarding reports that he was blocking parts of the Brannan farm plan. Anderson vigorously denied the charge; then, to convince the doubting President, he asked that Brannan himself be questioned.

So Truman picked up the phone and asked Brannan to hustle over to the White House. A few minutes later, all three sat down and ironed out their differences. The results of that talk will probably be felt on every farm in America.

Anderson denied that he wanted to extend the present, GOP-written laws, insisted that he saw eye-to-eye with Brannan on the basic needs for new farm legislation. Except for a few technical points, Anderson showed that he was 99 per cent behind the Brannan plan. Brannan in turn told the President that his old friend and former boss was helping, not hampering, the plan in the Senate.

Three-Crop Experiment

Anderson warned, however, that the program might be too costly to adopt all at once.

Brannan agreed, said the best approach would be to take one commodity at a time. His plan would call for "production payments" to the farmers to maintain a minimum selling price. Then, instead of having the Government buy up the surplus as it does with potatoes and let them rot, Brannan would let the price drop and give the consumer the benefit. The "production payments" would make up the difference between what the farmer gets and what the housewive pays.

Brannan agreed to try out his plan on two or three commodities, and Anderson in return promised to push the program in the Senate. Immediately after this conference, word was passed to the House which then approved the Brannan plan for three commodities to be selected by the Secretary of Agriculture. The three have not been designated yet, but they will probably be potatoes, hogs and wool.

The Senate is still dragging its feet—but not through any fault of Anderson, who is a member of the Agriculture Committee. The truth is that Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, chairman of the committee, is sluggish about passing the bill. And the ranking Republican, Vermont's able Senator George Aiken, is holding it up by asking critical questions. He claims the Brannan plan is nothing but a revamped version of his own program, adopted by the Eightieth Congress, and he sees no reason for substituting.

400,000 U. S. Envoys

The live-wire American Automobile Association has launched a unique campaign to educate American tourists on how to be good-will ambassadors.

Last week this column published a suggestion to Undersecretary of State James Webb that the State Department issue with each passport a reminder—as the Army did to GIs landing in England during the war—that great good will can be accomplished by the careful American tourist while great ill will can be stirred up by the opposite type.

The American Automobile Association has taken up this idea and is reminding its members that every tourist can be a diplomat. The average man-in-the-street in Europe never meets an American Ambassador, he gets his ideas about the U. S. A. from a confusing hodgepodge of propaganda—some of it Communist—or from the 400,000 Americans going abroad this summer.

The Communists have been waging an astute campaign to sour world opinion on free-spending, loud-talking Americans. So the best way to counteract that propaganda is by improved behavior on the part of those Americans.

Boiling down all its 10-point advice into one sentence, the AA declares: "When abroad, you are a guest; act like one."

Note—Virtually all United States efforts to win over Europe so far are on the basis of government-to-government. Yet governments can change overnight. People don't. That is one reason why the roots of lasting friendship must be planted in people.

Smithsonian Gets Skeleton Of Phytosaur

Arizona soil has yielded the almost complete skeleton of a phytosaur, large crocodilelike reptile that lived in the slime of the Reptile Age, some 150 million years ago.

The find, it was announced, has been received here at Smithsonian Institution.

Dug up by Geological Survey workers some time ago, the fossil is one of the most complete of its former kind.

The phytosaur, Smithonian scientists explain, was a flesh-eating monster with a long snout, nostrils almost on top of its flat head, and rows of viciously sharp teeth. It lived in warm swamps in central North America.

Formidable enough for all its 15-foot length, it probably lost out in the "survival of the fittest" because of its clumsiness, scientists speculated.

Its way of life, apparently like that of crocodiles, may have thrown it in direct competition with the more agile crocodiles of those years, which may have wiped out the species in the course of a few million years.

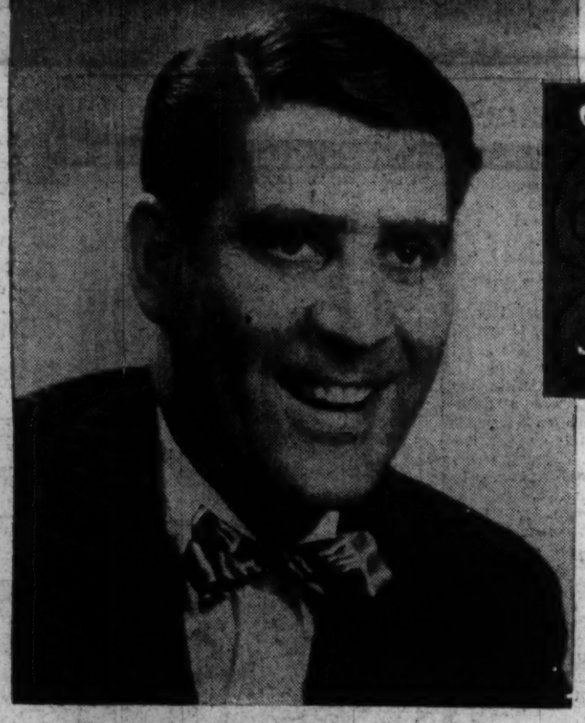
Number 2 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News



HAROLD K. MELNICOVE, Director of Merchandise Presentation, Building Supervision and Maintenance, among other things, has the honor of having one of the longest titles in our store. He started with The Hecht Co. after having studied art at the Corcoran School of Art in Washington, D. C. He became Display Director in 1942, later moved up to his present position. Mr. Melnicove's first love is his family which consists of a son, Gary, and a daughter, Margo. They consume all the time he doesn't spend on his second love . . . making The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop.

Blueprints Of Our Future...

Says Harold Melnicove, Director of Merchandise Presentation, Building Supervision and Maintenance

Like the big oak tree that sprouts from the little acorn . . . The Hecht Co. grows and grows from the humble three story department store started in 1896. Businesswise and buildingwise, The Hecht Co.'s expansion is a dynamic story of department store planning and designing. In the year 1948 alone, over $1,813,000 was spent on improvements for the public's shopping convenience. The men pictured above are largely responsible for the physical shape of things at The Hecht Co. Mr. Walter Litwin (center), Chief of the Planning and Designing Division, is the architect who, with his staff of draftsmen, designs and plans the various projects proposed by management. Mr. Wallis Koelling (left), Building Superintendent, and Mr. William Bozman (right), Chief of Building Alteration and Removal, complete the team of men who supervise building maintenance and the actual construction of a proposed project. It is their job to follow through on every last detail . . . from the placing of selling counters to choosing the color scheme for walls, ceilings and floors.

Projects handled by the department range from the re-spacing of selling counters and fixtures in any one department, to such longer range undertakings as the designing and equipping of our $2,500,000 Silver Spring store. Science and technical "know-how" play a big part in making our stores attractive for our customers and associates . . . adding to our efficiency so that our customers get faster and more complete service. Careful planning of our Service Buildings, spacing of counters and show cases for greater shopping convenience, lighting and arranging of merchandise so that it is easily seen . . . easily accessible, are the day to day duties of the Merchandise Presentation Division . . . a job which, we're sure you'll agree, helps make The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop.
